IN Hamburg yesterday explosion of a big tank containing phosgene gas killed 11 and drove 10,000 from their homes. The gas, one of the most deadly used in war, is almost imperceptible to those inhaling it, and kills swiftly.

GERMANY, forbidden by the Versailles treaty to manufacture war gas, may find it difficult to explain the existence of so big a supply.

Except for falling rain, the gas would have exploded, with thousands killed.

THAT should interest us. If we have a war, which Providence, friends of idiots and children, forbid, the first event would be the unloading of such gas on our cities, by airplanes.

Where would the planes come from? From big plane carriers, launching them a few miles off our coast, of course.

YESTERDAY was cheerful for money lenders. All kinds of money—call money, time money, etc.—lent at 6 per cent, a higher rate than in any other civilized country.

Big men have decided it is time for little men to stop gambling. And as they control money and its price, through the Federal Reserve and otherwise, they can have their way, almost.

SPECULATION pulled in its horns a little way, not very far. It is hard to cure a tiger that has tasted blood, or a Bull that has tasted profits.

THE real sufferers, in the speculation-reform wave, were the brokers. Fed full with many four-million share days, they did not like the 2 p. m. closing, or sales cut to 2,782,000 shares. Temperature is a little lower, but the speculative fever is still running.

HAVE you a little E. I. du Pont de Nemours stock in your safe? Yesterday it gave shareholders a $7,985,000 melon in cash, part of a payment of $6 for three months, or at the rate of $24 a year.

The du Pont company owns one and a half shares of General Motors for every share of du Pont, and handed on to stockholders the extra $2 paid by General Motors, a few days ago.

"To him that hath." But do not gamble or overlook the fact that some stocks have dropped in price $60 to $70 a share recently.

CRIME continues to write its unpleasant history. In Moscow police could not hold back crowds at the trial of three poets, Altshuller, Avrushanko and Anokin.

At a party in which vodka and drugs shared the honors, they treated a young girl, Zoya Islamova, so cruelly that she killed herself the next day.

The testimony is described as "very unpleasant," hence the crowd.

IN Shelby county, Tex., "Buddy" Evins, colored, was hanged to the limb of a tree, same limb, same tree on which another Negro was hanged five years ago.

"BUDDY" is accused of shooting a white man.

It is not for people living in the North to ask why the white mob insisted on hanging the Negro, instead of leaving that work to the hangman. Afraid he might escape, perhaps.

WEIGHT has its advantages, Fallstaff to the contrary notwithstanding. Mrs. Myra Huddleston, of Mattoon, Ill., has broken the world's record for long swimming. She swam 50 hours, beating any other woman's record by an entire day, and beating the best masculine record by four hours.

MRS. HUDDLESTON weighed 240 pounds when she started, 20 pounds less when she finished. Skinny girls and women, you need not weigh 240, but you should be ashamed to cut down your vitality for the sake of an ugly, bony figure.

NEW YORK milkmen say fifty million milk bottles have been lost or stolen during the last year and want a "Bring Them Back Week."

It is wrong to detain milk bottles. But if the country is to have a "Bring Them Back Week" many would vote in favor of a "Bring Back the Beer Bottles Week."

There may be a vote on that next November.

P. S.—But the beer bottles will NOT be brought back.

WHILE we lack beer, we have whisky, poisonous and plentiful. Mr. Patrick Mitchell, otherwise known as "The Link," and "Patsy the Gentleman," has gone to his reward, with many bullets in his head.

Gangsters "got him," and his head's last resting place, as the spirit fled, was the brass rail of a speakeasy bar, 50 feet long.

IN Turkey a new law closes motion picture houses to children under 16.

In a few years motion pictures will be part of public education in every public and private school, Turkish schools included. Motion pictures carry information to the brain instantaneously, no stoppage anywhere.

WORDS must be changed into mental pictures before the mind grasps their meaning.

The story about Mohammed creating legions of celestial warriors from a handful of dust could be made in picture a thousand times as real as a Koran text can make anything.

MRS. CALVIN C. COOLIDGE

When Mrs. Calvin C. Coolidge, the First Lady of the land, as they say, sees a friend of hers—or a friend of her husband's—she waves. And warm are the greetings she waves. Here, Mrs. Coolidge has just spied in the great crowd an acquaintance at the 150th anniversary of Phillips Academy, the ceremony at which President Coolidge was principal speaker.

CINCINNATI, May 22.—With Remy Kremer, the clever Frenchman, bearing the pitching burden, the Pirates will engage the Cincinnati Reds here today in the fourth game of the series, and probably will look at Carl Mays' submarine ball, the veteran hurler being slated to work for the Reds.

Sparky Adams is not expected to be in shape to get back into the lineup today, and Eddie Mulligan will be found at his position at second base. He acquitted himself favorably in Adams' shoes in the double bill of yesterday, which resulted in an even break, the Reds taking the first game, 4-3, and the Buccos the second by a 6-3 count.

LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION PROVES MASTER BOXER

Sammy Mandell was too clever for Jimmy McLarnin, the hard-punching challenger for his lightweight championship, and easily outscored the Irish lad throughout their 15-round bout at the Polo Grounds, New York, last night. Picture reveals how Mandell's superior form gave him the edge.

DRAIN LAKE FOR GIRL

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 22.—Search for Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, missing since May 14, focused about Mill Creek Park today where preparations were going forward to drain Lake Glacier. New clues were found in the form of a string of beads near the lake, partly identified by the mother as belonging to the girl, and a small gold pin.

Footprints of a girl and a man on the mud floor of a vacant house were found by boys and examined for possible connection with the case.

Park commissioners have offered men, boats and grappling hooks to drag Lake Glacier, but efforts to plumb the "bottomless pool" near Umbrella rock, where stains believed to be blood were found, have failed. Geologists say recovery of a body from this pool is impossible because of a channel believed to lead from the bottom of the pool to a hidden chasm.

City Chemist George Stevens declared that the "blood pools," at sight of which the mother came to the verge of hysterics Sunday, were positively not blood. Mrs. Rosenbaum telegraphed Ora Slater, Ohio detective noted for his work in the Mellett and other murders to come and work on the case.

Riveting Annoys Judge; Orders Work Halted

HARRISBURG, May 22.—(AP.)—Riveting on the new North Office building was stopped yesterday by order of the Supreme Court. It made too much noise.

When court opened the riveters were hard at work and the noise so disturbed the members of the court that Chief Justice Von Moschzisker ordered the operations halted.

Benson E. Taylor, secretary of properties and supplies, ordered the work to cease in compliance with the court's order. Contractors have been trying to establish a time record in erecting the steel work for the new office building.

Soon after the hammering was stopped three young women attired in knickers appeared at the door, but after a glance in they decided not to enter. Rules regarding proper dress of men are strictly enforced.

2 ESCAPE IN CRASH OVER 45-FOOT CLIFF

FREEDOM, Pa. May 22.—An automobile with two occupants swerved and rolled over a 45-foot cliff upon tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Eighteenth street here yesterday. Nelson Obrenovich, 23, of Apricot street, Duquesne, driver, and his sister-in-law, Anna Teurich, North Thirtieth street, Duquesne, escaped with slight injuries. A wreck train removed the wreckage from the tracks.

5 HURT IN AUTO CRASH IN FOG AT ROCHESTER

ROCHESTER, Pa., May 22.—Five men were injured and two automobiles were wrecked in a head-on collision in a dense fog on the Rochester-New Brighton road yesterday. Melvin Eckels, of Freedom, suffered a broken jaw. The others injured, all of Rochester, were Lawrence Holler, Charles Cornelison, Charles Jamison and John Buttermore.

RUM PROBE GETS HELP

The slowness in which witnesses in the rum conspiracy probe passed through the Federal grand jury room yesterday indicated the government is carrying on a new course of interrogation in its inquiry into illicit liquor conditions in Pittsburgh. Although 200 witnesses reported in answer to summonses, only 60 appeared before the inquisitors.

The possible new course in the federal examination is due to the arrival here of Attorney Norman J. Morrison, a special assistant to the federal attorney general, according to well-defined rumors about the Federal Building. As a result of the retarding of the schedule for witnesses the crowd waiting to be heard today included many whom the grand jury was unable to call yesterday, as well as those originally scheduled to be heard today.

Attorney Morrison arrived from Washington yesterday. He is recognized as one of the government's most efficient indictment drafters.

Attorney Morrison spent most of the day in conference with United States Attorney John D. Meyer; Louis E. Graham, chief legal aide to Administrator John D. Pennington and other government attorneys. It is understood that Mr. Morrison will remain in Pittsburgh until the grand jury is ready to make its return.

The grand jury held three sessions yesterday and has planned, it was reported, to hold night sessions tonight and Thursday.

Eight witnesses were sent to a room in the United States attorney's office to refresh their memories concerning information sought by the inquisitors yesterday. This seemed to indicate that some were unwilling witnesses.

208 STILL IN DANCE

Homestead's marathon dance was 37 hours old at noon today and the field had been reduced from 185 to 104 couples. Since midnight 52 couples had decided that continuous dancing was not the easiest pastime in the land.

The dancers felt the strain as the shuffle very slowly passed into the second day, and marathon experts estimated that more dancers were leaving Homestead than any other city in Pennsylvania, to say nothing of the 47 other states.

The marathon bosses found difficulty in establishing just who had quit the race, and an hourly roll-call was deemed necessary. Most of the retiring candidates retired by grabbing their hats and coats and neglecting to tell the Stahl Gardens

How Strong Is Al Smith In Western Pennsylvania?

TO answer this question, that is heard everywhere in Pittsburgh today, the Sun-Telegraph prints a ballot below.

These ballots will not appear every day, but occasionally; and on those days no extra papers will be delivered to any agent nor will papers be sold in bulk to any individual or organzation. Ballots received in bulk will not be counted. No more than three in one envelop. Thus a fairly accurate estimate of the relative strength of Hoover and Smith may be secured.

Gang Feud Flares; 2 Shot

Hill gang warfare has flared up again, police say, in reporting another attempt at assassination—the third attempt on the same man within a year.

While the detectives and police today continue their search for his assailants, Joseph Pangallo, 28, of 1245 Church avenue, McKees Rocks, is recovering in the Mercy Hospital from bullet wounds in the left arm and the left ear. Pangallo, sitting in his automobile last night at Fifth avenue and Magee street, exchanged shots with his assailants.

Harry Chiocca, 27, of 177 Warrington avenue, shot in the left leg during the fight, is declared by police have been with the gang that shot Pangallo. Chiocca was given first aid at Mercy Hospital and later taken to city detective headquarters where he was interrogated. There were four men in the group that suddenly opened fire on Pangallo.

Chiocca and four others arrested as suspects were held over for investigation by Magistrate A. D. Brandon in Morals Court today. They are Nick Vipon, 149 Washington street; Mrs. Dominica Finette, 40, and Frank Sero, 37, of 1241 Bluff street; Kate Drago, aunt of Pangallo, Church avenue, McKees Rocks. Vipon, a pedestrian, narrowly escaped being shot. A bullet pierced his sleeve.

"Wait until I get out of here and I'll get 'em," Pangello said at Mercy Hospital in identifying Chiocca as one of the men who shot him, Detective Jerry Deasy testified.

Last summer Pangallo was blown through the top of his automobile when a bomb exploded in the machine in Wylie avenue near Washington place. The bomb had been placed under the hood and connected in such a manner that it exploded when Pangallo pressed the self-starter.

INNOCENT VICTIM

Several months ago a man who worked for Pangallo was shot down in a shoe shop conducted by Pangallo in McKees Rocks. It was stated at the time that the killers were looking for Pangallo and believed the man in the shop to be him. Pangallo, however, was at his home recovering from the effects of being blown from his machine.

HOPE DIES AT MINE

By AL GOUGH.
Staff Correspondent.

PIT MOUTH, MATHER, Pa., May 22.—Hope of finding any more of the 211 men trapped 350 feet underground after Saturday's explosion was practically given up at noon today, after a careful search of the right faces, back of the wrecked sections. Only one man has been taken out alive since Saturday night. He is Frank Krubick. He was brought to the surface about 3 o'clock this morning in exceptionally good physical condition.

After receiving first aid and a small quantity of food, he was put to bed under a physician's care, his mind having been slightly affected by his terrifying experiences during the sixty hours he was entombed.

115 STILL ENTOMBED

About 115 bodies still remain in the mine, it is believed. Out of 80 or more bodies brought to the surface, 64 have been identified, two remain unidentified and the others are being prepared for burial in the emergency undertaking rooms set up in the mine machine shop, close by the shaft. Mine experts said that the prospects were that all other missing men, numbering 115, would be added to the list of dead. Fourteen men were taken out of the mine Saturday night, two of whom died. Krubick was the fifteenth man taken out of the mine alive.

MANY BODIES SEEN

While hunting for survivors who might have barricaded themselves in the air locks along the right faces, searchers reported they had come across innumerable dead, but

FIRE

Despite flames that rage through sections of the mine, Mather rescuers keep doggedly at their task of combing underground for signs of life among men still entombed as result of Saturday's explosion.

AID

Help has been sent Mather from all surrounding towns and police and firemen continue to maintain a close guard around the mine proper. Residents of the little town and the curious who drive there to watch the rescue work, are kept from interfering with the harassed rescue teams. Note the policemen and firemen here.

BUILD

To carry on their rescue work, the crews must fight flames, drive out dangerous gases that threaten another explosion, and build brattices as they go to control the gas. Here, men on the surface start building supplies down into the pit.

HOPE WANES

Hope now is waning in official circles for the lives of the men still entombed, despite reports that pockets of fresh air are found in some sections of the workings. J. H. Evans, Mather mine superintendent, confers with helpers here.

PASS DRUG FARM BILL

WASHINGTON, May 22.—With lightning-like rapidity the House has passed the Porter bill, establishing two Federal farms for special treatment of narcotic drug addicts.

The measure was sent to the Senate for its approval without a dissenting vote. Chairman Graham, Pennsylvania, of the Judiciary Committee, moved that the bill be considered under a special rule requiring two-thirds votes in the affirmative for passage.

Cries of "vote" rang through the House, indicating that the members were eager for speedy action. Representative Snell, New York, who was presiding, put the question and the measure sailed through.

Graham, Porter, of Pennsylvania author of the bill, and other members were prepared to speak in its behalf, but the House had been previously advised of the importance of the measure by the Judiciary Committee, which reported it by unanimous vote.

Backed by the Hearst newspapers from its inception in Congress, the bill was indorsed by a score of Federal judges, district attorneys, officials of the United States Bureau of Efficiency, the Department of Justice and wardens of the Federal penitentiaries as a boon to society.

Efforts will be made to obtain its passage in the Senate before Congress adjourns, but should its supporters be unable to obtain a vote at this session, it will be pending in the Senate when Congress returns next winter.

The Attorney General, Secretary of the Treasury and Secretary of War are directed in the Porter bill to select sites for two institutions for the confinement and treatment of narcotic addicts.

Minor Decoration Miffs Jeritza; to Shun Vienna

International News Service.

VIENNA, May 22.

MME. MARIA JERITZA, famous Austrian opera singer and beauty, has quit the Vienna State Opera and will never sing here again, she announced today. The trouble arose over a French decoration. When the intimation came from Paris that the French government intended to decorate Mme. Jeritza and several other singers, the prima donna expected to receive the insignia of the Legion of Honor. When she got only a minor decoration known as "Officer of Public Instruction" she immediately blamed the director of the opera company and resigned.

"I am not conceited," Mme. Jeritza said, "but I could not accept the French Decoration because the King of Denmark recently bestowed personally upon me a gold medal for art and science. I could not accept a lower decoration afterwards. I shall never sing here again."

RELIEF AT DEATH MINE PRAISED

WAYNESBURG, Pa., May 22.—Greene county relief organizations have responded nobly to the needs of stricken miners' families and rescuers at Mather. Hundreds of men, women, boys and girls, without waiting to be asked, have pitched in with a will and nothing in the way of relief has been overlooked. The American Red Cross has been authorized by the Pickands-Mather Collieries Company, operators of the ill-fated mine, to take charge of the relief program. Co-operating with this world-wide relief agency are the Salvation Army, Waynesburg's Kiwanis Club, the Boy Scouts, church people from all over the county, the National Guard and a number of other welfare organizations.

Mrs. William J. Kyle, of Waynesburg, chairman of the county chapter of the Red Cross, has been in charge of the work, but Miss Helen Caldwell, case worker from the National Red Cross at Washington, D. C., was sent to take over active supervision of the work. She is a national authority on family relief matters and she relieved Mrs. Kyle, who had been on duty constantly since Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Kyle and her workers have been commended on every hand for their quick response and remarkable foresight in providing for relief at the little mining settlement. They arrived on the scene within a few hours of the fatal blast, equipped to set up a canteen at the main shaft where rescuers were served with coffee and sandwiches, cigarets and tobacco and practically everything they needed.

By Sunday morning the women had established their identification bureau where bereaved families were able to check with company records in identifying the bodies as they were brought out of the wrecked mine.

There has been almost a steady stream of women and children going in and out of the Red Cross headquarters since, and more than 100 experienced workers have been engaged in comforting the distressed families in the homes.

In many cases there are children to be cared for, grieving mothers being unable to go about their duties as usual. In no case that has come to the attention of the relief workers has there been any marked physical suffering, the loss of husband, father or brother causing more mental anguish than anything else, and these workers are doing a great deal to alleviate the sorrow which has fallen upon these people.

C. L. Greenlee of Pittsburgh, field representative for Pennsylvania, attached to the national headquarters of the American Red Cross, came here to look over the situation and report back to Washington. He expressed himself as being extremely pleased with the situation as Greene County Chapter has managed it.

they forged ahead without disturbing these in the hope of finding live men. With the completion of their search, however, at noon, the rescuers turned their attention to bringing out the dead.

More than 175 rescuers were in the mine at one time last night taking part in the hunt for survivors, but with the end of the search, they sought rest from the arduous work and only a few crews were in the shaft today.

As fast as the bodies can be handled by the undertaker, more are brought up and the work of identification goes on.

RELATIVES HYSTERICAL

Relatives are allowed no nearer than 200 yards of the shaft and the rescuers' activities are hidden from their view by buildings and a little knoll in front of the mine entrance. Strict police lines are kept and welfare workers constantly hover near the bereaved relatives trying to comfort them in their sorrow.

Occasionally, a hysterical woman breaks down at the police lines and doctors and nurses are constantly attendant upon their needs. One frantic woman had to be carried to her home this morning, the attention of two nurses and a doctor being required to quiet her overwrought nerves.

REDMEN OPEN STATE CONVENTION AT ELKINS

Rescued As He Was Choking

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

MATHER, May 22—"Gee, you come just in time—pretty soon something choke me dead."

These were the first words of Frank Krubick, when rescuers reached him early this morning after nearly 60 hours in the terrifying darkness of Mather mine, wrecked by an explosion Saturday afternoon.

The words were directed to Bruce Diehl, of Harmarville, who headed the rescue team which found the entombed man about a mile and a half from the main shaft on the right side of the section where the explosion occurred. Krubick recognized Diehl almost immediately. They had worked together some time before.

NO ILL EFFECTS

Apparently Krubick, the only man found alive since Saturday night, has suffered no ill effects from his terrifying experiences in the wrecked mine. "He kept his head," declared rescuers, "and remained behind the barriers in an air lock and the air in this place was almost as fresh as it is outside."

Krubick and a fellow miner whose name was not learned, ducked into the airlock with the first dull boom and rush of air indicating an explosion had occurred. Krubick's buddy left the chamber some time yesterday, the rescued man revealed, in an attempt to reach the surface. His body was found several hundred yards away, where he had succumbed to the deadly black damp which swept the underground passages in the wake of the fatal blast.

Krubick was elated to get back to the surface again and as he was brought up the lift on a stretcher, he raised himself on one arm and looked around.

"GOOD TO GET OUT"

"Gee, it's good to get out again," was his rather laconic remark as the rescuers rushed with their burden to the Red Cross first aid station near the main shaft.

Groups of rescuers and relief workers were standing near the shaft when Krubick was brought out. There was no outburst nor demonstration, but a sort of repressed cheer was felt rather than heard from the assembled groups. Only a few of the bereaved residents of the town were waiting behind the ropes out of sight of the shaft, but word spread quickly through the town and before daylight crowds of men, women and children were jammed behind the ropes, and state police, National Guardsmen, volunteer firemen and company police had their hands full keeping the crowd back.

FLOATING POISON IS DRIVEN AWAY

HAMBURG, Germany, May 22.—(AP.)—The cloud of phosgene, one of the deadliest of the war gases, which hung over Hamburg and claimed 11 lives had been dissipated, but its menace still lingered today.

More than 200 persons were in hospitals. Authorities believed many of these might die since the gas sometimes does not have fatal effects until a week or longer after it is inhaled. A content of only a half a gram to a cubic meter of air is sufficient to cause death.

All available milk in the city was requisitioned to serve as antidote. There were 96 persons in Hamburg hospitals, about 100 others at Wilhelmsburg and 30 at Harburg. Phosgene poisoning causes a purulent inflammation of the lungs and in cases where consciousness is retained, death comes after horrible suffering.

DESOLATION

Cattle lay dead in the fields, chickens and ducks in the farmyards and dogs and cats in the city streets—mute evidence of the terrible death which crept through the sleeping city. Trees, grass and growing crops shriveled as the silent menace spread.

Three hundred and fifty families driven from their homes in terror by death's silent approach were permitted to return when the authorities were convinced that the gas had been dissipated by wind and rain. They returned apprehensively. They shuddered as they reflected upon their close escape from death and upon the sufferings which might be inflicted upon a defenseless people by gas bombs dropped from airplanes in time of war.

PANIC ENSUES

A shift in the wind carried the gas to a pleasure resort where men, women and children, among them a wedding party, were making merry. Some fell unconscious from their chairs which were grouped about the table set for the feast. Promenaders dropped in terrible agony. Soon the cry of "poison gas" arose and panic reigned.

The entire section of the city near the tanks was terror-stricken. Police and troops herded the populace into the emigrant sheds of the port. Motor ambulances rushed the victims to hospitals. Firemen and ambulance attendants, insufficiently protected by smoke masks, fell in the work of rescue.

Adequate masks were rushed from Berlin by airplane and, protected by these, the firemen got close enough to the leaky tank to dilute its contents and empty it into a canal. Others fought the cloud with water and ammonia.

THEY DANCE -:- As Marathon Drags Through Second Day -:- THEY REST

SOME SAY

Peg Haley and Jimmy Sumners, right now say some o' the marathon dance followers in Homestead, make the best-looking couple on the floor. And in the meantime, the dance drags through its second day.

THEY'RE SLEEPY!

FAMILY

With this team, the dance is somewhat of a family affair. These folks are brother and sister, John and Eleanor Uhrin, Homestead. As you can see for yourself, they're sleepy. But they sleep as they dance.

WOULD WIN

When they started out on that dreary midnight, George Morgan and Bertha Staner had ideas of winning this Homestead marathon affair. The dance is attracting hundreds from Homestead and nearby boroughs and promises to eclipse all records.

VETERANS

These folks are marathon dance veterans. They danced recently in the Pittsburgh marathon. Here, Vera—Vera Humbertson, if you must have her full name—"fixes up" a little. George Rihn's her partner.

MARINES -:- U. S. Pekin Legation Fortified -:- WATCHFUL

LIEUT. HOLCOMB

Lieut. Col. Thomas Holcomb, U. S. Marines, heads the defense of the Peking U. S. Legation building.

PROTECTED

It is here that marines are erecting barricades for use in the event the Chinese Nationalists drive back the Northern forces and take Peking. This column of marines is shown marching through the legation building (rear) grounds.

MOUNTED MARINES

This detachment of U. S. Marines is on duty at the legation. The squadron is mobile through its use of horses. At the same time, other foreign legations are amassing their Chinese forces to repel any attacks if the Nationalists take the city. The situation for foreigners in Peking is tense. Northern forces have sallied out to attempt to stem the drive.

PREMIUM PAID ON SCRAP

George R. Gibbons, vice president and secretary of the Aluminum Company of America, admitted today, on being quizzed by the Federal Trade Commission in regard to one of the company's transactions, that it had bought scrap aluminum at a higher price than it would have cost it to produce the virgin metal.

The commission charges that the company, in furtherance of a plan to remove scrap aluminum from the market, has engaged in unfair practices in violation of the Clayton act. The company, it is alleged, sold virgin sheet aluminum to certain manufacturers of automobile bodies and cooking utensils at lower prices than it charged other concerns for the same material, and bound them, in return for the concession, to sell it all of their scrap material. The result has been, it is charged, that scrap aluminum, of which 32,000,000 pounds were sold in the open market in 1922, has disappeared from commerce, and the Aluminum Company's monopoly of the raw material made more complete.

MISTAKE IN ENTRY

Searching for evidence to support the accusation, Richard P. Whiteley, attorney for the commission, questioned Gibbons concerninfg certain scrap transactions disclosed in the Aluminum Company's books.

Gibbons said that what appeared to be a purchase of scrap aluminum from the Wood & Spencer Co., of Cleveland, had been so entered by mistake. The Aluminum Company sent some of its own castings to the Cleveland concern to be machined, he said, and stipulated that the borings were to be returned with the castings.

GIVES LIFE IN WAR ON YELLOW FEVER GERM

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP.)—The name of Dr. Hideyo Noguchi, Japanese scientist, has been added to the list of those who have given their lives in the fight against the dread yellow fever of the tropics.

The Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, with which he had been connected since its founding in 1904, has been advised that he died at Accra, on the pestilential gold coast of Africa, a victim of the fever whose cause he had just identified by studying his own case.

Dr. Noguchi, who was 51 years old, undertook the expedition for the Rockefeller Foundation, to which he had been loaned by the institute, last November. At Accra, one of the unhealthiest spots of the globe, he set up his microscopes to discover, if possible, the relation between the African and the South American yellow fever.

Ten days ago friends here received letters saying he had won his fight and had identified the cause of the fever as an indirect result of his own illness, which had confined him to a hospital from December 25 to January 9.

While ill he innoculated a monkey with some of his own infected blood. It contracted the disease and died. Additional experimentation definitely linked the fevers of the two continents and he set to work to find a vaccine which would counteract it. Associates will carry on the search aided by his notes.

SUICIDE NOTE HINTS QUARREL

DETROIT, May 22.—(AP.)—Indications that Dr. Frank R. Loomis quarreled with Mrs. Gertrude B. Newell, divorcee, shortly before he ended his own life here Saturday, was contained in a second letter the doctor wrote before inhaling illuminating gas in the offices of a dentist adjoining his own suite.

Mrs. Newell's name figured prominently in Dr. Loomis' trial on a charge of slaying his wife, a year ago. He was acquitted of the charge.

The second letter, which followed one addressed to a Detroit newspaper, in which the physician declared he was innocent of murder and that his conscience was clear, was sent to Victor Kolar, associate director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and an intimate friend of Dr. Loomis. In the second letter, Dr. Loomis informed Kolar that Mrs. Newell referred to as "G" had told him she intended to return to Ypsilanti, Mich., to live with her father. Police say Dr. Loomis and Mrs. Newell had been occupying an apartment here.

He Asks Divorce, But Still Gives Her Haircuts

Before he sued his wife for divorce, Randolph Smit, Wilkinsburg barber, cut her hair for nothing, but since then has charged the customary fee, Smith testified in Common Pleas Court in his action against Clara M. Smith.

Mrs. Smith denied that testimony. She said Smith took her money and gave it back to her in change. Smith charged misconduct.

Pittsburgh As Others See Us

"There is no city in the Union that has taken the Salvation Army to its heart in greater measure than Pittsburgh."

—EVANGELINE BOOTH.

EVANGELINE BOOTH

EVANGELINE BOOTH, commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, born in London, England, a daughter of William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. After five years in field service in England she went to Canada and for eight years commanded the Salvation Army there. She has been head of the organization in this country since 1904. She is unmarried and resides in New York City.

The Salvation Army and Pittsburgh are old and tried friends, and between the two there is perfect amity. We admire the greatness of Pittsburgh—her high civic standard, her wonderful buildings, her typically American industries and above all her generous-hearted citizens. Pittsburgh sees in the Salvation Army an organization of immense value to the community, and whole-heartedly supports us in all our multifarious efforts for the good of humanity.

Then, I personally have been fortunate in my visits to your great city; the sun has always shone, and the smoke about which I have heard so much was not to be seen. Even if the smoke had been there I should still like Pittsburgh—for where there is smoke there is fire, and the Salvation Army and its commander loves the fire!

There is no city in the Union that has taken the Salvation Army to its heart in a greater measure than Pittsburgh, and we in return have given of our best to benefit its less fortunate citizens, and to proclaim to all the panacea for every woe of man—the Salvation of our Lord Jesus Christ!

Evangeline Booth

MISSIONARIES STAY AS BATTLE RAGES

PEKIN, May 22.—(AP.)—Fourteen American missionaries, including nine women, remained at their posts today in the dangerous war zone at Paotingfu, 80 miles southwest of here.

Northern and Southern (Nationalist) armies battled along a wide front to the south and southwest of Paotingfu.

The hazard to the civilian population was increased by the danger from air raids. Twice yesterday Southern planes swooped upon the city. Some Chinese civilians were killed and the people were panic stricken.

Twenty thousand refugees from the fighting zone have sought safety in Paotingfu. Most of them were women and children. The American missions were playing a leading part in feeding and caring for the destitute.

CANTON PROTECTS JAPS

SHANGHAI, May 22.—(AP.)—The government of Canton has prohibited anti-Japanese demonstrations and ordered that the Japanese must be protected as well as other foreigners.

The government explained that it wanted no anti-Japanese agitation, but it was generally understood that the real reason was that the government feared anti-Japanese demonstrations would give the Reds an opportunity to rise against it.

A message from Hankow today said that serious fighting had broken out between the forces of Gen. Cheng Chien of the Nanking Sixth army which occupied Hankow on November 16 and the Kwangsi general, Li Tsung-Jen.

SMELLS OPIUM, NABS SMOKERS

The odor of opium smoke led City Detective Frank Ferris to the room of Harry Yee, 25, at Second avenue and Grant street, early today. Yee and Yee Wong, 23, of 512 Second avenue, were arrested and a pipe and opium paraphernalia were confiscated. They were held for investigation.

FLIES TO PITTSBURGH IN SEAPLANE

FOR MEETING

George G. Hetrick, supervisor, West Penn Appliance Company, Kittanning district, came to Pittsburgh in a hydroplane for the regular monthly meeting of supervisors. The flying boat was piloted by its owner, T. H. Morgan, Kittanning, who says his craft is the first of its kind to claim a Western Pennsylvania town as a home port. They flew 55 miles in 25 minutes and tied up in the Monongahela River at Wood street.

Senate Tactics On Dam Bill Hit by Will

Will Rogers.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 22.—"Wasn't this your idea of what the original founders meant Congress and the Senate to be," when a bill is introduced, let it be voted on, and either approved or rejected by a majority. "It was never meant that by political maneuvering that any bill could be prevented from being voted on. Yet that's the standing of Boulder Dam in the Senate. In other words, you don't find out if the prisoner is innocent or guilty. You just keep him in jail till he dies. Yours.

3 RAIDS IN CITY YIELD LIQUOR

Home brew, wine, gin and whisky were offered with meals in the restaurant at 4619 Forbes street, Federal prohibition agents stated this morning as a result of a raid on the dining room last night. Mary Ann Weber, 38, was arrested.

In a saloon at 7203 Frankstown avenue, prohibition agents reported arresting John W. Acker as proprietor, and Alec Ball, as bartender. Alcohol, gin, whisky and five gallons of moonshine were seized, agents said.

Five gallons of gin, two barrels of beer, 36 pints of whisky and 148 bottles of home brew were confiscated, agents declare, in the saloon at 7143 Frankstown avenue. Nick Monica and Louis Walton were arrested, according to the agents.

AS SCHOOLBOYS TOOK UP SEARCH

SCHOOLS CLOSED IN YOUNGSTOWN

Answering the call of Mayor Joseph Heffernan, more than 500 high school and upper grade boys rallied at Central police station and then swarmed through Youngstown (O.), in a house-to-house, cellar-to-garret search for missing Beatrice Rosenbaum, 10, who disappeared from her home a week ago. The search was directed by Chief of Police J. J. McNicholas. The city has been zoned. A prize of $3,175 in rewards may be won by the boy who unearths a clue leading to the solution of the mystery. Above, the boys rush from the police station. Schools were closed for the day.

SEEK PADLOCKS IN ETNA

State and county struck at illicit liquor traffic in Etna yesterday when padlock injunctions were sought in Common Pleas Court against five saloons in that borough.

Twelve individual defendants are required to appear May 28 and show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be granted against their places. The proceedings were brought by Major R. M. Ewing in behalf of State Attorney General Thomas J. Baldridge, and District Attorney S. H. Gardner.

The defendants are: Steve Sabaski, Peter Ladesic, Jr., his wife, Margaret Ladesic, 17 Freeport street; John Milcic and his wife Mary; Joseph Stora, Rudolph Modrovich and Antonio Modrovich; Michael Burkowich, Jr., and his wife, Philomena Burkowich; Charles Tomachak and George Huhn.

Housecleaning No Jury Duty Excuse

Jury duty comes before housecleaning.

So Judge Josiah Cohen ruled yesterday as he ignored a letter produced in court by William Simms, Sewickley Negro. The letter explained that Simms was expected to begin housecleaning yesterday for the mother of J. M. Schoonmaker, Jr.

FOKKER (W.VA.) PLANT VISITED BY AIR CHIEF

WHEELING, W. Va., May 22.—(AP.)—Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War in charge of Aviation, inspected the new Fokker airplane plant at Glendale yesterday and later left by plane for Cleveland, O., to fill a speaking engagement last night. He was greeted here by Anton H. G. Fokker and other officials of the Fokker Aircraft Corporation of America, and also was honor guest at a luncheon with army reserve officers as hosts.

HEADS GIVE HALF PAY TO UNION

All salaried officers of the United Mine Workers of America in the Ohio, Central Pennsylvania and Northern West Virginia districts have been giving back nearly half their pay into the union since the bituminous coal strike began, it was learned today. The question arose when announcement was made abroad that representatives of the British miners' federation in Parliament had voluntarily reduced their salaries.

"Our salaries have not been reduced," said Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, "but we have increased our assessments on all officers, board members, field workers and national organizers. There is an assessment of 25 per cent in addition to our local union dues and our relief contributions which amount to 40 per cent or more of the salaries received. These extra assessments have been made since the strike started and will continue. Thirty-two officials are included. Stenographers and other clerical workers in the offices are not affected. The salaries of officials in the union are based on normal conditions and when no strike is on these assessments amount to scarcely one per cent."

D. P. W. ASKS 2 TRUCKS TO SPEED SIGN WORK

In an effort to speed up the placing of street signs, the Department of Public Works is endeavoring to secure two trucks. An ordinance asking $6,000 for the purpose was presented to Council.

RAP GARBAGE COLLECTION

Better garbage and rubbish collection in the Third Ward is demanded by the League of Women Voters in a letter received by Council yesterday from Mrs. Della B. Hershey, chairman of the city government committee. There is "a shocking lack of sanitary conditions prevailing in the backyards and alleys" of that section, Mrs. Hershey wrote, placing the blame on the failure to properly collect the rubbish and garbage.

A hearing on proposals to change the entire system of collections, first suggested by George P. Kountz of the Allied Boards of Trade, is scheduled for this week.

Famous for fine interior work, Barreled Sunlight now also available in a new form for exterior painting

THOUSANDS of satisfied users of Interior Barreled Sunlight have asked for an exterior paint of the same superior quality.

This insistent demand has now been met with the new Outside Barreled Sunlight.

Like its famous companion product, Outside Barreled Sunlight remains white and new-looking long after ordinary paints have lost their beauty and freshness. It is intensely white, has remarkable "hiding power", flows freely and evenly, is durable and even-wearing.

Both Interior and Outside Barreled Sunlight are extremely easy to tint. Dealers carry handy tubes of Barreled Sunlight Tinting Colors for tinting small quantities.

A Special for Women—

SILK COATS

$35.00

They are new coats for Summer, especially chosen for this May event, and not to be shown until tomorrow.

Their attractiveness is in their simple smartness, and in their excellent quality throughout. The fabrics are rich, heavy faille and faille-crepe; they are lined with a fine grade of crepe satin; they are lightly interlined to give them the required weight and make them set smartly; and they are well tailored.

Besides the model pictured, there are others with scarfs, and some with tailored Johnny collars. Most of the coats are black, although there are some in beige. Sizes range from 34 to 44.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE GAGE OF BATTLE

By RICHARD G. SWARINGEN.

JULIAN HOBBS poked a finger from under his blankets and drew back, shivering. It was still dark, but his clock inexorably chimed six. Julian could not hate that clock as it deserved to be hated. It was a gift from Callie Pope.

Six o'clock of his big day! Remembering, Julian sprang out of bed. Joy stirred his feet in a jig-dance on icy matting while he fumbled for the light switch. Stepping into bedroom slippers, he seized his heavy dumbbells; began his morning exercise, squatting and rising, forward and back; this side, and that side, up, down.

Though Julian had been unable to add an inch to his five-feet-six height, half an hour of this each morning and night kept him hard as hickory. His big day! Julian began to sing, in a voice far from melodious.

In the next room a shoe banged the wall, and a sleepy snarl demanded: "If you've gone nutty, why advertise it?"

"Bed pardon," Julian said contritely. "I forgot."

He was no longer merely a bookkeeper. He was a construction boss, to have charge of a job a hundred miles from the home office! Gregory Melford had promoted him. Julian was thoroughly familiar with the technic of erecting store buildings; besides, Melford had given him written instructions so plain that there was little chance of error. This morning he was to catch the 11 o'clock train.

Julian started to whistle, but refrained. Taking clean underwear, he went across the hall to the bathroom used by the top floor boarders. The water made no pretensions to warmth, but Julian shivered under the shower happily. He rubbed his body to a rosy glow, planning.

Callie usually drove her father to the bank before nine. Julian decided to call her up and ask her to stop at the office afterwards for him. He could get away long enough to tell her the news. This, he hoped, would mark the beginning of an even closer relation between them than friendship.

When he made good on the new job, he and Callie would be married—he hoped. Happiness wrapped him in a rosy cloud as he shaved and dressed and went down to his boarding house breakfast.

A small, clerkly, correct person, he sat at the long table in silence while others talked. Afterwards, carrying his suitcase downtown, he stopped at a drug store to telephone Callie Pope. She promised to see him before he left town, and he went on, whistling.

Gregory Melford's office, over a store, was reached by steps from the street. Julian ascended, opened the door and stopped sharply.

Melford sat before his desk, a big, florid, handsome man. His strong lips clamped a cigar at a meditative angle, and he was gazing at a photograph on his desk. He calmly put it into a drawer and turned.

"Hello, Julian!" Melford greeted him heartily. "Ready to go, eh?"

Julian did not answer this cheerfulness in kind. The sight of Callie's picture there had chilled him.

"Yes." Absently he looked at the drawer, then at Gregory Melford. "Was that—er—Miss Pope's picture?"

"Yes," Melford nodded casually, and rose from his chair.

"Eer—" Julian swallowed hard, moistening his lips. "Ah—"

"I may as well tell you, Julian," said Melford gently, "that I intend to marry her."

"Well—" Consternation made Julian pale. "I—Maybe I flatter myself, but are you sending me away so you can have a clear field?"

"Only partly. I really need you on that job."

"You're a— cad!" Julian said unsteadily. "A low cur!"

"Don't say anything you'll regret, Julian," Melford suggested good-humoredly. "I'm sorry, in a way; but you see—"

"A yellow sneak!" Julian struck his boss on the mouth. His blow was too sudden to be avoided. Blood started flowing. Julian followed with a body blow, and leaped aside; kicked the larger man on the shin. He moved with the swift ferocity of a small and vicious demon.

Growling like a bear, Melford lowered his head and rushed. He drove his small antagonist into a corner; penned him there; enveloped him. Shaking his captive as one shakes a naughty child, he dragged him to a chair and sat him down forcibly.

At the same instant both became aware that Callie Pope was framed in the door.

The girl tall as Julian, was dark and glowingly lovely. She looked merely surprised; in nowise disconcerted or frightened.

"Callie!" Julian sprang up, his face burning. "I'm sorry! Wouldn't have had you see—" He gulped, anger and humiliation mastering him. "He—he said he's going to marry you! He's sending me away—"

"Fighting over me!" A smile danced in the girl's dark eyes. "Julian do you mean for me to understand that you—"

"I love you!" Julian cried wildly. "I want to marry you!"

The girl nodded. Her hint of mockery was gone, and in its place was a grave tenderness. "I've been hoping you'd say that, Julian."

"I resign!" Julian shouted at Melford exuberantly, crazy with happiness. "I quit now, before you can fire me!"

His exultation faded before the pain in the big man's eye.

Melford shook his head, smiling determinedly. "Resign nothing. I can't keep Callie from marrying you if she wants to, of course. But if you go and quit now, I'll thrash you good—"

Sunday Closing Is Ordered for Wilkinsburg

Sunday laws are to be enforced in Wilkinsburg next Sunday. Burgess J. R. Langley issued orders to the borough police yesterday to see that all grocery stores, fruit markets and shoe shining shops are closed at noon on Sundays. The police have not enforced the ordinance for several years, it was said.

DOPE SYRINGE IN PIE FOUND

When "Big Willie" Schreiner, alias William Campbell, an alleged drug peddler and addict, on trial in the Federal District Court on a charge of conspiring to violate the Harrison narcotic act, was returned to jail late yesterday afternoon, jail guards found a glass "dope" syringe concealed in a piece of pie Schreiner was said to have carried into the jail.

One of the counts in the indictment on which Schreiner is being tried charges that his mother, Mrs. Anna Schreiner, last February, attempted to smuggle a drug into the jail for Schreiner. It was concealed in a match box. Upon finding the syringe in the pie, a careful search was made of the prisoner for concealed drugs, but none was found.

The piece of pie was said to have been handed him by a friend, with other food, when court adjourned yesterday afternoon.

TRADER HORN-- THE GREATEST STORY OF ADVENTURE OF MODERN TIMES

Little Peru Bewitched by the White Goddess

Music and Drinks While Making Ready for the Liberation of Nina T—

What Has Gone Before.

Trader Horn, 50 years after going to the Ivory Coast of Africa, writes of his discovery of the White Goddess of the Isogas whom he found in their Josh House and identified as the daughter of an Englishman of aristocratic family. He conspires with an old friend, Little Peru, who is half Inca, to rescue the bautiful girl from the cannibals.

Liberty or Death for Nina

By ALFRED ALOYSIUS HORN
Edited by ETHELREDA LEWIS.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

I HAD ample time during my frequent visits to the Josh house to make all arrangements with Nina for her final release from the terrible place she was in. I also told her of Mr. Graham, my friend, who would come and help me to take her away.

ALFRED A. HORN

He would be here in a little while, so I warned her to be patient, and above all to be the same as usual for fear that the men who were continually around the temple should become suspicious, and never commence speaking to me in real earnest before she was sure they were half drunk, as when the liquor was in the wits were out.

I noticed she wore a stilleto with a beautifully carved handle in her belt, and asked her the reason she wore it. She replied that it had belonged to her mother and she intended to keep it by her, as if we failed in taking her away, she intended to use it.

I asked her how she meant to do so. Oh, she said, I should kill the first person who interferred with me before I have dived in the water. Should she be captured, she said, she would never let them take her alive; whilst she said this a gleam of vengeance shot into her eyes, but she quickly recovered and hummed a wild tune.

Prepared to Fight

I was surprised but smiled, and she noticed this and smiled also. It will all end well I told her if you only keep calm. My friend will be with me and I will bring enough force to wipe out the town if necessary. That I shall take you to a better place than this where you will be perfectly free, goes without mentioning. If I can do it by stealth without anyone here seeing or knowing so much the better, if it come to the worse I shall use force and act quickly.

She was greatly pleased with what I told her and gave me a kindly smile of pleasure. I could not miss interpreting it. This lady I could see more than ever before, was a fearless and most grateful piece of human structure and was highly intelligent.

Whilst the men folk forgot themselves in their cups I could have walked away with her often at these times, but there was no certainty of this at any time. Her own plan was the best and I determined to follow it as soon as possible. I had left word if news came overland for the messenger to follow me quickly, as I would always leave my whereabouts at the small ebony station at the mouth of the creek.

I waited for a week or more after the mail steamer carrying my friend was due, and decided to return to Sinclair and put in my time in patience with Herr Shiff and his assistant. I had not long to wait, however, before the messenger came with orders to send round the tug to Gaboon with the remaining ivory he might have on hand as this was to complete a consignment now awaiting shipment by the S. S. Angola on her return from Gabenda at the mouth of the Congo.

I also received my mail and also a letter from little Peru (Mr. Graham). Come at once if possible. I am anxious to see you. In a short while the tug was ready, and giving a fond goodbye to all we steamed west with my boat towed behind. We only made one stop at Angola for firewood, and the little tug Iowatha gave a splendid account of herself.

Little Peru

As I neared the main store at Coco Beach I could see the schooner Ruby Queen and could see standing aft, through my glasses, a tall, well built fellow dressed in white duck, he was waving his handkerchief and gesticulating frantically. It was my college chum, little Peru, now grown to a young man of splendid physique and alongside of him also waving his arms stood Capt. King, master of the Ruby Queen.

I altered the course of the tug at once and was soon alongside the Ruby Queen; with one spring and vault I was alongside my old mate and we more than hugged so that even old Capt. King wondered why such a meeting.

My best friend in the world, and he had grown a perfect man, a kindly, intelligent face, he was over six feet high and had a mustach. I could not realize that the little lad I had left at college was the same, but when he commenced to joke and open up it was certainly he.

He, too, wondered that a little lad that had been his playmate and had left him had grown so much and looked, as he said, a bronze picture of health in this deadly climate of the West coast and was now standing by his side.

We drank a Moet and Shandon to Capt. King and his schooner and slept on board that night. The Ruby Queen had been built as a yacht for an old seadog who had made wealth in the good old sea days. She was fitted up and built regardless of cost, was a splendid sailor and had been around the world more than once, and had been bought by the firm on the death of her owner who had succumbed to fever at Gaboon.

We were up early next morning as the Iowatha was due to sail in the afternoon. We dined with our chief agent and I bade him a fond goodby as also did my friend. Mr. Graham, I sailed at 2 o'clock, carrying Graham's luggage and never saw the good soul Mr. Carlisle again. He died of fever in Liverpool shortly before the day set for his wedding.

Going for Nina

We had a glorious trip to the Ogowe and as Graham had brought a beautiful Spanish guitar with him and was an expert player, having been taught to play the instrument in his early childhood, he could nearly make it talk, and I was never tired of hearing him play and sing, especially the true version of the old Spanish Fandango with variations.

He could soon tune his instrument to accompany the Native Ngombi or Harp and the two instruments played together sounded heavenly, as the sounds were much better on calm water than on land.

We entered the river and had some fine shooting. He was a good shot with either rifle or six-shooter, in fact surprised me. He had lots of practice in England, but had also private tuition on the use of the shooter and he gave me quite a few good tips, especially shooting right and left, using each weapon consecutively. I soon caught the dodge and with a little practice I could use left and right without losing any time in false motion.

Good weapons were of course essential and I was soon taught as I was always fond of the use of the gun. We now neared Nina's place and I told him so. Furthermore he must be ready for an agreeable surprise. Why? he said. I said nothing but noticed he commenced to pay a little attention to his looks, arranged his hair and asked me if it was usual to go without a coat, as I was in negligee. For myself, yes, but you are a first visitor so it would be well for you to be comme il faut.

Before we had arrived off the beatch he had obeyed orders. Nina I saw was hurrying towards the temple so I led him to the large spacious visitors' hut which was always mine only when I arrived. It was a perfect model of African savagery, animal skins were thrown over the seats in a rough and ready stile but the floor and walls were strewn with native mats of rare pattern and spears of various kinds hanging around ever ready for use completed a most charming decorative effect.

Above all everything was clean and tidy and was used principally by Nina, who superintended personally the sanitorium of this voodoo town. As Renchoro knew the run of the place he had brought up a few bottles of strong liquor for the use of visitors, the first of whom to put in an appearance was the Old Man, who had instructed me when I had been initiated.

He invited us to be seated and to my friend Graham, whom he eyed largely, he said: "You are my Ogenda (stranger). You are welcome and rest contented as you are under my roof." I translated what he had said and Graham thanked him, and as the bottles were on the table, I said These are yours, Father, and he smilingly helped himself and friends, who were never more than six or eight men and were employed in and around the house of Isoga.

I sent Renchoro for the boy who played the Ngombi so well. I told Graham to kindly accompany the boy with the guitar and take all with an air of don't care and quite usual. This he knew, of course, would help us in our future moves for the liberation. He was a good actor and even yawned at times, making passing events seem quite common.

MAY'S DRUG STORES—ALL OVER GREATER PITTSBURGH

How To Be Beautiful

by Maria Jeritza

Miles of Smiles.

SMILES are ranked among the 10 qualities most desirable in a wife by the prize-winning letter in a recent contest.

"A smiling, confident helpmeet," writes the prize winner, "is what a man wants in a wife." Sincere, spontaneous smiles cannot be over-estimated as an asset to beauty and charm and an influence for happiness and good.

You may have heard some discouraged person exclaim; "I am the most useless thing in the world!"

But I assert confidently no one is useless who can radiate comfort and good cheer through friendly smiling.

Never force a smile—that sort is painful to look at! Better a quietly grave countenance than a smile that is not spontaneous. If your thinking is serene, your heart filled with genuine goodwill, your smiles will take care of themselves. And they will be charming.

Good teeth, a healthy mouth and well-formed lips help make a smile dazzling and irresistible. Keep your general health good, visit your dentist regularly, follow his instructions, if you would have a wholesome mouth and sweet breath.

A good pomade will keep your lips smooth and free from the swollen, dried appearance that chapped skin brings. Rose-colored pomades can be bought in lipstick shape, but they are not rouge, for they merely freshen and moisten the lips and can be applied freely any time during the day when you have an instant to yourself. The rose color keeps the pomade from showing.

Here is a cream that should prove soothing and smooth out lines if you apply it to your lips every night and morning:

Cocoa butter, 24 grams; white wax, 4 grams; oil of rose geranium, 1 gram.

Be careful not to bite or pinch your lips with your teeth. Many women, especially those with a tendency to dry skin, have this nervous mannerism and do not know it. Watch yourself and you will soon outgrow the habit which destroys the appearance of the lips and betrays lack of poise.

Are there lines between your nostrils and lips? These cracks are caused by parched skin. Pat warm sweet almond oil into them every night after cleansing your face and let it sink in while you sleep. Mornings sponge the lines with Eau de Cologne or your favorite skin tonic or cold softened water.

Good health and sensible care will keep your lips and mouth wholesome and attractive. A genuine smile is as lovely as a sunbeam.

Use your lips to smile, smile, smile. The world needs your smile—it needs miles of smiles!

TRAIN HITS AUTO AS GATES FAIL

Failure to lower gates guarding the Amity street crossing of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad in Homestead, this morning, was blamed for a crash resulting in serious injury to George Thomas, 35, of 452 Highland avenue, West View.

The locomotive struck a car driven by Thomas, at the crossing, hurling it to one side and throwing Thomas through the windshield. He was taken to Homestead Hospital suffering from a probable fracture of the skull, severe contusions and cuts. His machine was demolished. Spectators told police the gates were up and that a street car had passed over the crossing a short time before.

CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS HEAR PRAYER LECTURE

The meaning and method of prayer in the Church of Christ, Scientist, was explained last night at Carnegie Music Hall, in a lecture delivered by Charles I. Ohrenstein, of Syracuse, Christian Science lecturer. Silent prayer, followed by audible repetition of the Lord's Prayer, Mr. Ohrenstein pointed out, is the practice in the Scientist church as justified by the teachings of Jesus.

STAGE AND SCREEN ACTIVITIES DETAILED IN PICTURES AND GOSSIP ABOUT PLAYERS

Comedy, Melodrama and Novelties Abound in Spoken and Silent Drama, Vaudeville and Burlesque

FOLKS YOU SEE :-: IN FLESH AND SHADOW :-: IN THEATERS

Katherine Wilson, leading woman in "The Man Who Came Back," Nixon stock attraction.

Ralph Morgan, leading man of George Sharp Players, in "Wooden Kimono," Pitt offering.

Fannie Ward, whose perrenial youth is featured in the Stanley's stage presentation.

W. C. Fields, comedian of the stage and screen, is in "Fools for Luck," Davis photoplay.

Ethel Blair, comedienne, appears in "The Plasterers," feature on stage of Aldine.

Festal Occasion Marks Opening of Nixon Players In "Man Who Came Back"

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

SOMETHING in the nature of a gala occasion was the opening of the Nixon Players' season of summer stock in the Nixon in the presence of a large audience last night. The women and the men in attendance had on the enough elegant raiment to signify the assemblage as regarding the event as something of more than ordinary character in the way of a social demonstration, as indeed it was. Our fair women and our brave men were out in force and the boxes were occupied with gay groups in which brightly colored shawls and other feminine pretties provided a resplendent note.

Of course, they were there to see a play, but an audience of that kind always is part of the play, so mention of that little matter is reserved. Before we get to the review we will have to say something about the opening formalities, which did not take place until after the final act of the production, which, if your curiosity must be satisfied, was "The Man Who Came Back."

County Commissioner E. V. Babcock, who said he was acting as a substitute for Mayor Kline, welcomed the Nixon Players to Pittsburgh and said the city was proud to have them here. He told the audience that Ann Harding, late leading woman of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," one of the season's successes in New York, was occupying a box. Miss Harding was accorded a demonstration. Harry Bannister, leading man of the Nixon Players, who is Miss Harding's husband, and other members of the company also made little speeches. Huge bouquets of flowers were passed over the footlights and it seemed as though everybody had a kind word and a smile for everybody else.

The play, a melodrama by Jules Eckert Goodman, that was quite a hit in its original presentation several seasons ago, was produced with all the elaborate detail that scenes in a rich home in New York, cabaret in San Francisco, opium dive in Shanghai and pineapple plantation of Hawaii call for. Scenically, the last details were attended to and from an acting standpoint there was nothing to criticize.

Harry Bannister gave a vivid characterization of a ne'er-do-well son of a rich man who, tired of his son's wild escapades, put him on his own resources. Instead of bringing him to his senses it just made him worse and he descended lower and lower until the discovery of the girl he loved in a Chinese den in Shanghai jarred his sensibilities and turned him back. He and the girl both fought their way back together and they redeemed each other.

Katherine Wilson was the girl, Marcelle, and she proved herself to be a real artist, her characterization of an opium addict being an incisive contrast with the type the girl was as her natural self. Both she and Mr. Bannister gave performances that made good impressions, promising much for the future popularity of the company. Fred Sullivan, as the father, Louise Quinn, C. Russell Sage and George Macready also played their parts well, as did a number of others in minor roles.

MYSTERY PLAY SPILLS CHILLS IN PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH.

Most everyone, we presume, knows that a "wooden kimono" is a coffin. Hence, when you know the new Pitt show is titled "The Wooden Kimono" you begin to suspect that it has to do with Murder and its little playmate, Mystery. So when you go to see it you expect to be mystified and to feel your spine has been converted into a speedway of racing chills.

And we don't think "The Wooden Kimono" will disappoint you. This production, which was seen as a road show in the Nixon last winter, offers a regular orgy of weird, petrifying moments. Further, the George Sharp players well succeed in wringing the chills out of it.

The play is in three acts. Action opens in the Red Owl Tavern, a rather deserted and isolated place. When the curtain goes up there's as nice a thunder storm in action as you would wish to see. Then the characters begin to move in and out of the scene. An air of foreboding hangs about their very movements. And what an array of characters there are: the mistress of the tavern, her insane husband, an author of mystery novels, a physician, a couple of women, who find themselves stranded in the storm, a hick sheriff, and so on.

Lights flick on and off: there are shrieks in the dark; shots ring out, and doors bang. There's a big clock that—but, never mind—let Mr. Sharp's players disclose the mysteries in their own way. We'll let you in on one secret, however. Three persons already had disappeared — presumably murdered — from the tavern before the action of the plot takes place. And more disappearances follow.

Laughs are sandwiched between the hysteric shrieks, the horror and the gloom. Mabel Kroman as Agatha Bloom, one of the stranded women, gives the piece much of its comedy. Just as some big moment of horror is flung on the audience, Agatha—frightened to death, almost—drops a witty line that sets the house laughing.

Anne Forrest is prominent and capable, as usual. Edwin Vail is the insane husband, who keeps harping about "the ghost; you'll see, you'll see—" sometimes rather ineffectively. There is a sort of mixed identity in the novelist role, or rather roles—Gordon Anderson and Ralph Morgan carrying these parts. Louise Gerard Huntington, as the mistress of the inn, adds much to the atmosphere of gloom and mystery. Others in the cast are John Thorn, Ralph T. Lee, Gus Forbes, Matthew Smith, Jr., Roy T. Taylor and Percy Kilbride.

The stage settings are well done.

When the suspense of "The Wooden Kimono" had ended at last night's opening, it was found that the chief casualty had been in the audience. One woman had fainted.

HATTON, BEERY FUNNY IN NEW GRAND PICTURE

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton bring an abundance of laughs to the Grand screen this week. Their new picture is "Partners in Crime." And it seems to be the funniest thing they have done since their debut as a comedy team in "Behind the Front." In Partners in Crime" Hatton is seen as a wise-cracking newspaper reporter, who gets his identity mixed with an underworld crook—which role he also plays—and Beery portrays a dumbell detective. Both of them become involved in a war between rival gangs. And both of them are rivals for the hand of the same girl. But a third fellow gets her in the end. Incidentally, the title writer has succeeded in adding additional laughs to the Beery-Hatton antics. "Winging West," a pictorial review of trans-Atlantic flights, is an added attraction. A comedy film, "Circus Blues," also is presented.

FANNIE WARD, MIRACLE

Fannie Ward, who made her stage debut amid the gas lights of the eighties and danced through the elegant nineties into pioneer days of the movies is with us yet—and as up to date as any flapper of the late 1928 model. With friends among three generations of theater audiences she might count herself one of the most popular women on stage. Daughter and the tired business man like her impersonations, father and mother knew her in the pictures and grandpa recalls when she capered forth in that gorgeous show of the good days, "Sinbad, the Sailor." In the Stanley, theater where she heads the bills this week she is advertised as the "Miracle Woman." Some folks apparently do not believe in miracles, and expressed doubt that the girlish sprite that hops about the Stanley stage is the same woman who began her professional career back in President Hayes' time, but just ask any old fellow who saw "Sinbad," and he'll confirm all that is claimed for Fannie Ward today. She's the same girl, and here's wishing her good luck and many blessed years to come. Fannie Ward heads a stage presentation of high class acts, several worthy of headliners. Phil Spitlany features both classic and jazz with variety and good taste. Billie Dove, as beautiful as ever, in "The Yellow Lily," a picture version of fiery romance of a Maygar grand duke, is the screen offering. It is a stirring drama, well acted and superbly photographed.

ALDINE PIANIST WINNER

Zelaya, pianist, is one of the shining lights on the Aldine vaudeville bill this week. This gentleman, quite rotund, heralded as the son of a former president of a South American republic, is an artist at the piano. He knows the classics in music and knows how they should be played. Jazz music, he says, is terrible. But he puts some of it into his presentation because it's popular and because, as he says, he wants to show how much more worth while "good music" is. Charles O'Donnell and Ethel Blair, assisted by a couple of other performers, offer a skit, "The Plasterers." Bricks fall, scaffolds tilt, iron pipes clang and a good time, in a rough-and-tumble way, is had by all. Edith Clasper, dancer, with three young men, offer a dance revue—not too good. The Alexander Brothers and Evelyn are seen in juggling ball tricks. A singer, Lucille Benstead, in classical and popular airs, wins applause. The photoplay is "The Thirteenth Hour," featuring John Barrymore. The actor portrays a murderous criminal, masquerading under the guise of a professor. It is a dull sort of a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde affair, with clutching hands and mysteriously sliding panels.

Merit on Stage, Screen Fun In Penn

A stage presentation above the ordinary affords Teddy Joyce exceptional opportunity in the Penn this week for unctious performance of his duty as master of ceremonies. Tommy Wonder, the boy dancer, does not belie his name and gives a truly artistic act. Unlike most child actors, this little fellow is entirely devoid of self-consciousness and he is unspoiled by applause. A chorus of beautiful girls, in several novelty dances gracefully done, keeps things moving on the stage. Coscia and Verdi, musical comedians; the Lett Sisters and Louise, in popular "blues," and Don Albert are all worth while. Dick Liebert, organist, recalls Lindbergh's flight of just a year ago, in a new organ number. "Circus Rookies," with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, is the screen offering. It is a broad comedy with melodramatic trimmings and a plot without beginning or ending. It opens with a laugh and ends with a scream, and in between is 75 per cent merriment and 25 per cent thrills. Louise Lorraine is "the girl" in the picture.

GIBB TWINS IN HARRIS

Quite an array of versatile talent is on the Harris stage this week. The headline billing offers the Gibb girls, Mary and Margaret, known as America's Siamese twins. They sing, play the piano and dance. The Shurr boys do some peppy stepping and a bit of singing in an act of their own. Later they assist the Gibb sisters in their presentation. The mother of the twins, Mrs. John Gibb, also makes an appearance. Hilton and Almy, two feminine performers, quarrel and argue through 12 or so minutes of amusement. They got much applause at the opening performance yesterday. Bob Conn, blackface comedian, is back again with his patter and jokes. He's lively on his feet and his dancing gets lots of applause. Lamb's Manikins flip-flop about the stage as the opening vaudeville feature. The photoplay is "Wallflowers," based on the Temple Bailey novel. It concerns a young man, whose father leaves him a large fortune—on condition that the son doesn't marry until he's 40. Hugh Trevor plays the son. An organlogue, news pictures and a cartoon comedy are on the bill.

ACADEMY BURLESQUE HAS SPECIALTIES

"Red Hots," this week's burlesque in the Academy, has the players as globe-trotting and visiting many countries. Chubby Drisdale, soubret in the principal role has several songs and specialties, including "Little Italy," in which she is assisted by Gordon Rydeen. Billy Wallace, is prominent in the comedy. Billy Pitzer and Gaby Fields have a special number in "Rose Of Picardy." Lina Thomas, sings "A Million To One You're In Love." The chorus girls get their special chance in "High Ling Fling" and a Scotch drill. "Little Egypt," dancer is an extra feature appearing in a varied program. Margie Bartel presents a novelty act.

LYTELL IN PERSON ON SHERIDAN STAGE

Bert Lytell, movie player, appears in person in a playlet, "The Valiant," headlining the vaudeville bill which opened yesterday in the Sheridan Square. The theme of the playlet is prison and the miscarriage of justice. "Ukulele" Pat Haley, Pittsburgh boy, is another feature of the bill. Francis Hart and Co. appear in a dance act. The Dexterious Trio offer a bicycle novelty presentation. Foster, Fagan and Cox are seen in a comedy skit. The photoplay is "Flying Luck," featuring Monty Banks. The plot has to do with a youth who takes up aviation after 10 correspondence school lessons. The program also includes a new organlogue and a comedy picture.

CARNEGIE STUDENTS TO PRESENT "CAMILLE"

Alexander Dumas' famous "Camille" will be produced by the students of drama of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, beginning tonight for a run of eight performances.

DAVIS COMICS ARE HIT

Weaver Brothers and Elviry, who occupy the Keith-Albee vaudeville headline position on the Davis stage this week, have a hilarious comedy act. The men are familiar, having amused audiences here with their rube characterizations and musical novelties, including their handsaw tunes and two-man jazz band. The addition of their sister, Elvira, a comedienne whose portrayal of a country girl with a tart disposition is a scream, easily puts the act in the feature class. It was riotously received at the opening yesterday. The artistic honors of the bill go to Adela Verne, skilled pianist. Her rendition of "The Wind," by Aklan, Paderewski's "Minuet in G," Liszt's "Second Rhapsody" and "The Swan," by Saint Saens, were rewarded by sincere evidence of appreciation. The dancing act presented by Jean and Leon Lee Gail, Dave Steiner and Edna Maye and the Sheldons, boy and girl, is extraordinary. Hal Neiman, tramp comedian with good voice, is another whose act is well liked. The genuine acting talent of Arthur Byron is wasted in a silly farce, "A Family Affair," in which he is assisted by his wife and two daughters. Bellclair Brothers give a novel athletic exhibition that wins applause. "Fools for Luck," the screen feature, has W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin in the leading roles, and it doesn't take long to forget it. News pictures, film comedy and novelties complete a bill that is very good as a whole.

OLYMPIC PHOTOPLAY IS "LOVE HUNGRY"

"Love Hungry," featuring Lois Moran, is the current photoplay in the Olympic. In the picture Lawrence Gray portrays a newspaper writer who gives advice in affairs of the heart. He is known by a feminine name. Miss Moran is seen as a chorus girl who proves to him that he doesn't know what he's writing about. On the Vitaphone is a playlet, "Lucky in Love," featuring Cylde Cook. Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini, grand opera singers, and Four Aristocrats, vocalists, present other Vitaphone entertainment.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

"MANHATTAN," a musical portrait of many-mooded New York, which will seek to convey in terms of music and song the varied character of the metropolis, will be radiocast during the Eveready hour, a Red Network feature to be heard over WCAE at 9 o'clock tonight.

The Old World atmosphere of Washington street with its Syrian candy vendors and restaurants specializing in okra-stuffed-with meats; of Little Italy and Mulberry Bend, of the Bowerie of old one-legged Peter Stuyvesant and his staunch Dutch burghers; the Bohemian gaiety of Greenwich Village, "The Avenue's" starched stiffness, the mirth and foibles of Broadway in the "roaring Forties," these and other elements of the melting pot have been drawn upon for the Eveready offering.

Nathaniel Shilkret will conduct the Eveready Orchestra in its rendition of the musical selections chosen to represent the life and traditions of the different sections of Manhattan. In addition, there will be several solos by singers specially engaged for the "Manhattan" program.

Another network presentation over WCAE will be the Voters' Service at 7 o'clock. This week the service will have "Prohibition" as the theme of its discussion. At 8 o'clock the Seiberling Singers will be heard over the same station. Their opening selection, "A Legend From La Provence," is by a German composer, John Louis Nicode. The song following, "Where'er You Walk," here arranged for quartet, is considered one of the loveliest tenor solos ever written. It is taken from Handel's opera "Semele." Cadman's "At Dawning," Jensen's "Murmuring Zephyrs" and "Song of the Vagabonds" from Friml's "Vagabond King" will be on the program.

Several local features will be presented through KDKA. The Four One-Minute Men will be on the air at 7 o'clock. At 7:30 o'clock the Haller Bakers will broadcast a program of Welsh songs, featuring the boy singer, Robert Bodycombe. The Maytag Ramblers will go behind the microphone at 10 o'clock and a half hour later the Whosoever Children's Chorus of Canonsburg, Pa., will be heard.

Network programs over KDKA include the Stromberg-Carlson hour, Dickens' Characters and Rythmic Ripples.

Local broadcasts will make up the night's offering from WJAS. A feature of this will be vaudeville acts from the Penn and Aldine at 10:45 o'clock.

3 TUNNELS, 3 BRIDGES WON'T GO IN BOND ISSUE

35 MILLION TOO MUCH TO ADD, IS VIEW

The proposed Ferry street bridge and tunnel, Liberty avenue bridge and tunnel, North Side-Corliss street bridge and West End-Crafton borough tunnel are not likely to be included in the county's $40,000,000 special bond issue election. This was intimated today by County Commissioners.

The projects would cost $35,500,000. With the many improvements contemplated by Commissioners by the bond issue, to include these four major projects, it would mean that the voters would be asked to favor a $75,000,000 bond issue. Commissioners believe that this sum would be too great.

Representatives of South Hills, Chartiers Valley and Ferry Street Bridge Association met with Commissioners to urge the Ferry street project.

"I will be in office for three and a half years longer," Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong said. "And before I leave I will see that at least the bridge of this project is started."

J. B. Shay, president of Joseph Horne Company, and Walter Rosenbaum, of Rosenbaum Company, spoke in favor of the improvement.

DIDIER RITES WEDNESDAY

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Paul Didier, Belgian consul here, who died Saturday night at his home, 1506 Chateau street, North Side. Services will be held in the Christ Episcopal Church, Union avenue, North Side.

Mr. Didier had been Belgian consul here for almost a half century and he was prominent also in engineering circles. A veteran of the Franco-Prussian War, Mr. Didier was aged 75.

He came to this country about 48 years ago and soon afterward became associated with the Pittsburgh and Western Railroad, now a part of the Baltimore and Ohio system. He was principal assistant engineer here of the Baltimore and Ohio at the time of his death.

He succeeded Dr. William J. Holland as Belgian consul here about seven years ago. He was a member of Ascalon Commandery, Knights Templar; the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Railroad Engineers Association, the Luther Burbank Society, the Union Club, Chamber of Commerce and Lodge No. 339 of Elks. He leaves his widow, two sons, Paul Didier, Jr., of Harrisburg, and Victor Didier, of Pittsburgh, and a sister in Belgium.

M'KEESPORT ASKS ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

The improvement of Jerome street, $1,800,000, and Snake Hollow road, McKeesport, $200,000, was asked by a committee of business men of McKeesport meeting with County Commissioners.

When it was learned that the Snake Hollow road was state owned, Commissioners said they would be unable to assume any state obligations. The committee was told to take the matter up with state highway officials. The Jerome street improvement will be considered.

CHICAGO CO-ED DYING

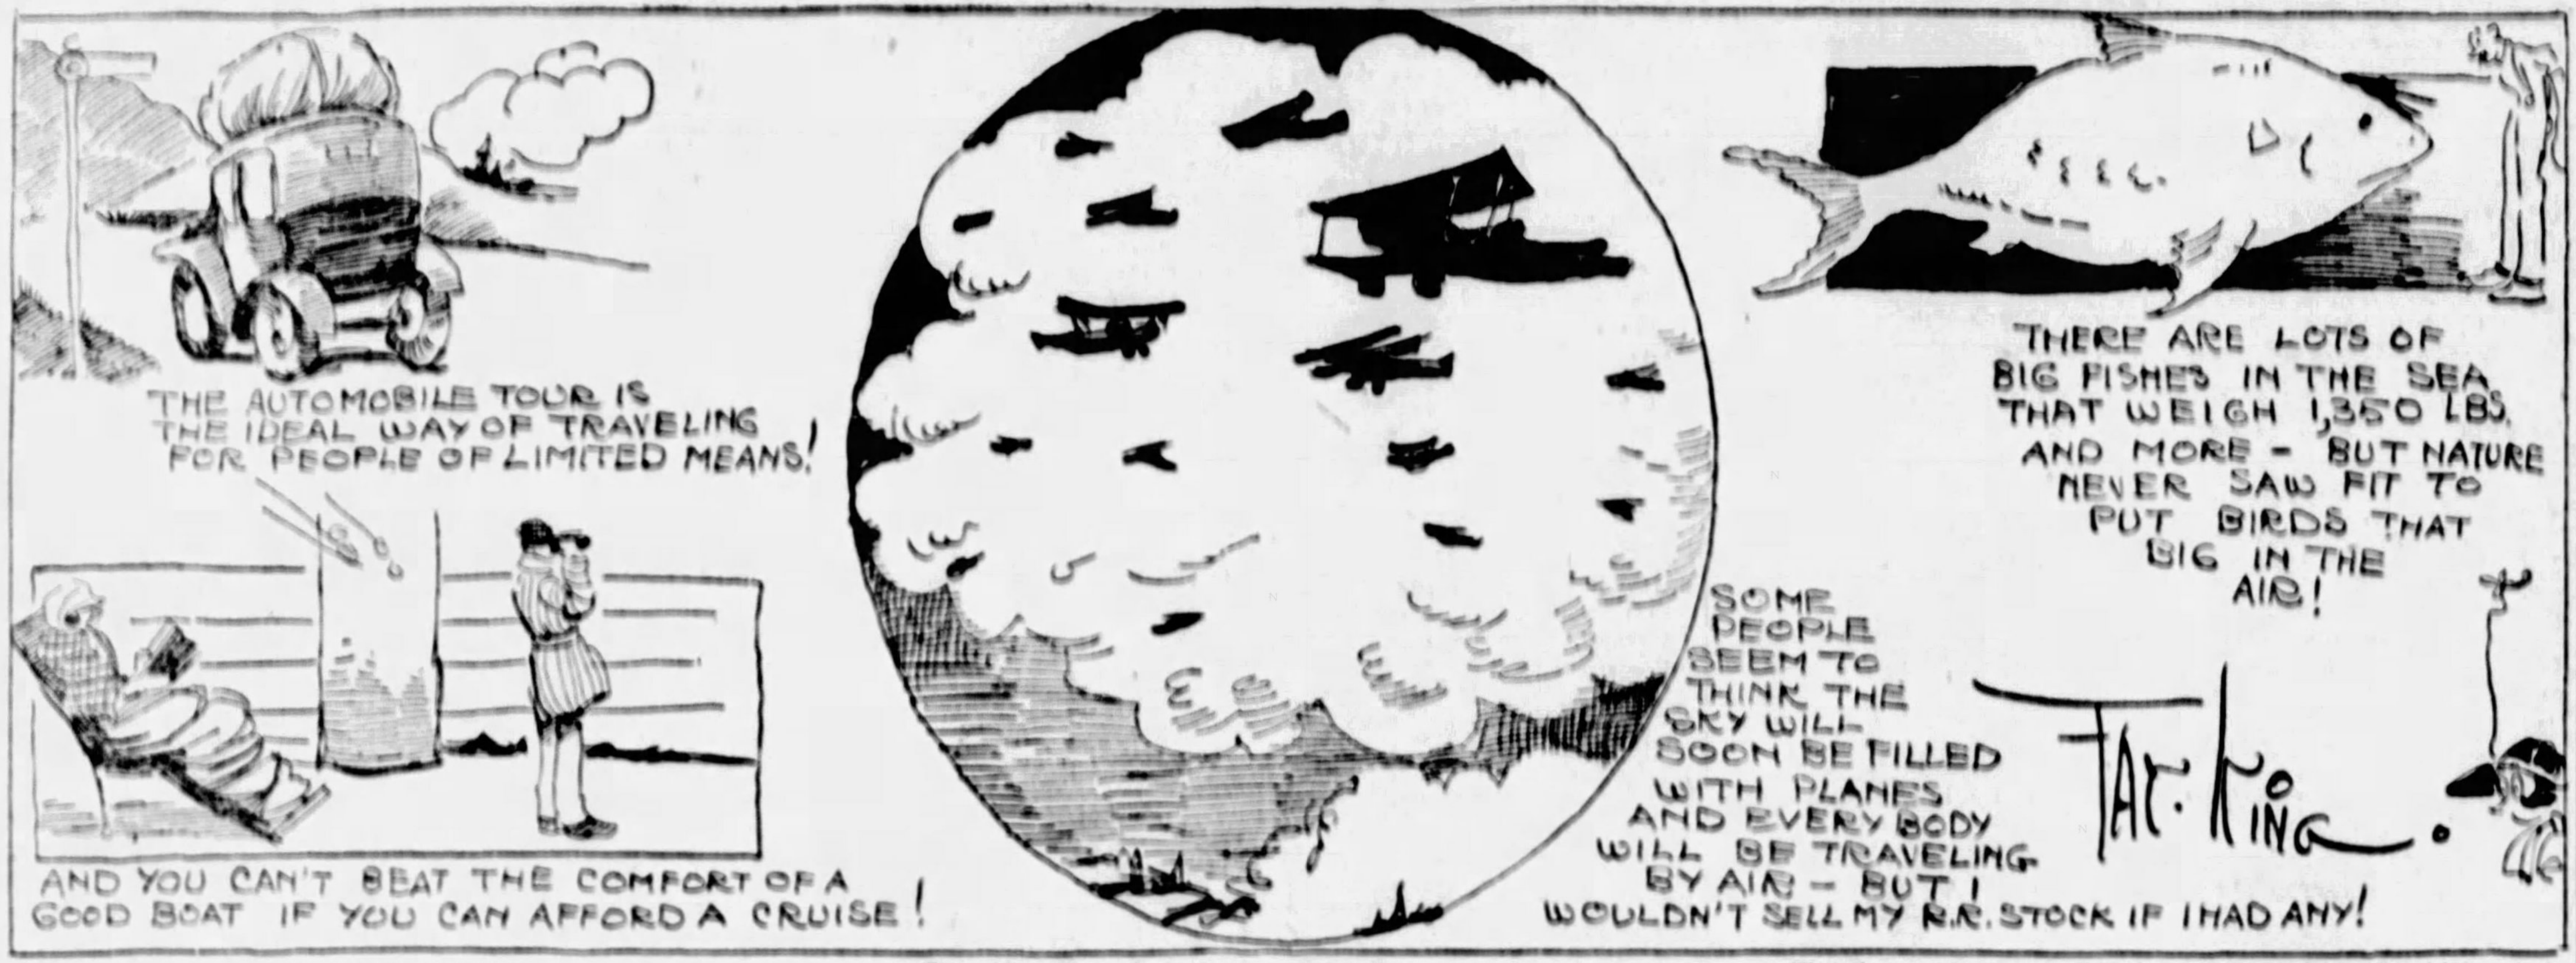
HELEN R. OWENS

Because her parents objected to her marriage to a Pittsburgh man before she was graduated from University of Chicago, Helen R. Owens, daughter of Prof. Frederick W. Owens, Penn State College, took poison and is dying in a Chicago hospital. Reports say that, since Miss Owens took poison, her parents have agreed to an

Fay King Can't See Planes as Travel Monopoly



THE AUTOMOBILE TOUR IS THE IDEAL WAY OF TRAVELING FOR PEOPLE OF LIMITED MEANS!
AND YOU CAN'T BEAT THE COMFORT OF A GOOD BOAT IF YOU CAN AFFORD A CRUISE!
THERE ARE LOTS OF BIG FISHES IN THE SEA THAT WEIGH 1,350 LBS. AND MORE - BUT NATURE NEVER SAW FIT TO PUT BIRDS THAT BIG IN THE AIR!
SOME PEOPLE SEEM TO THINK THE SKY WILL SOON BE FILLED WITH PLANES AND EVERY BODY WILL BE TRAVELING BY AIR - BUT I WOULDN'T SELL MY R.R. STOCK IF I HAD ANY!
FAY KING.

By FAY KING

SOME persons who are very enthusiastic over flights seem to think that it will be only a matter of time until ships, railroads and automobiles will be discarded in favor of airplanes.

But try as I will, I cannot bring myself to feel that flying will ever become the most popular mode of travel.

In the first place, only a minority of persons travel in haste or have their business interests at various far places. The average person travels for pleasure and observation. A great part of that pleasure lies in the leisure of the trip and that it takes a number of days to cross the ocean or the continent.

The relaxation, the air, the friendships made and the many things seen and enjoyed are all a part of the reason that the trips are made.

Some persons who like traveling at sea take smaller boats for the very reason that they take longer to cross the ocean than the more luxurious and speedy liners.

When one travels by train they are close to the country through which they pass, learning from what they view and able to stop at many places along the route.

The automobile which rolls along the beautiful highways is an ideal way of seeing the country. One can carry the family dogs along and stop to chat with ranchman or citizen as one passes through their part of the country.

The skyscrapers we build, the great trucks and vehicles that have replaced the wagons of other days and the huge liners that cruise the seas are all in keeping with Nature's plans.

Nature has filled the land with great mountains thousands of times taller than our tallest buildings. In the sea and on the land are many fish and animals as big as boats and trucks.

But compared to the fish and animals tht inhabit the land and the sea the sky has very few birds, and none make the long flights that man purposes for the airplane.

And while I may be backward-minded, I cannot help taking into consideration these things in tempering my enthusiasm for the future of flying.

Richars, the late Mrs. George Blackhanm, Andrew, Michael J., Edward J. W. and Theodore H. Doehla. Besides her five children, she is survived by 12 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. She was a member of the Voegtlys Evangelical Protestant Church and Tabea Verein.

NEW KENSINGTON MAN SAVES EIGHT AT FIRE

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., May 22.—Leaping from the porch roof of his burning home early today, Kazimer Wielobob, 835 Third avenue, ran a ladder up enabling his wife, three daughters, three sons and a boarder to reach the ground safely. Wielobob suffered a sprained wrist. The fire, believed to have been caused by defective wiring caused $3,000 damage.

Father, Mother In Legal Fight Over Child

A habeas corpus proceeding was begun in Common Pleas Court to prevent Mrs. Catherine Mertz of Wilmerding from taking her 4-year-old daughter Rita to Detroit.

Attorney Samuel S. Rosenberg who represents the father, Albert Mertz, 514 Airbrake avenue, Wilmerding, claims rightful possession of the child, the parents being separated. Judge Josiah Cohen has fixed Wednesday morning as the time to hear the proceedings. Mertz has had custody of the child until recently.

FIGHTS WITH SUICIDE

ROSELYNN PRYCE

Miss Roselynn Pryce, society editor, Connellsville (Pa.) Morning News, tried to prevent suicide of an unidentified man, about 65, who leaped from the Crawford avenue bridge there into the Youghiogheny River and was drowned. Miss Pryce grappled with the man after leaping from her machine, but he slipped from her grasp.

ALANDALE, STAGE CRITIC DEAN, DIES

NEW YORK, May 22.—Alan Dale, 67, the dean of American stage critics, died suddenly last night on a train bound for his birthplace, Birmingham, England.

Mr. Dale sailed from New York a week ago last Saturday on the steamship Columbus, for his annual review of the European stage.

Mr. Dale, whose real name was Alfred J. Cohen, was born May 14, 1861. He was educated at King Edward's school there and at Oxford University.

His boyhood ambition was to be a radical leader in the House of Commons, but this was forgotten when his mother gave him a set of Charles Dickens novels and on looking up the novelist's biography he found his hero had begun his career as a reporter.

Dickens had been a stenographic reporter, so Dale studied stenography and when he had finished his schooling he went to Paris and became the correspondent of an English weekly for which he wrote mostly about plays and poets, painters and boulevardiers.

After three years in Paris he tried his luck in London and his first job was as secretary to Leander Richardson, the London correspondent of a syndicate of American newspapers.

He came to New York with Richardson, who obtained him a position on the New York Tribune as a reporter, and when Richardson went to the Times as drama critic and editor, Dale went with him.

Upon many occasions when Richardson was otherwise engaged, Dale substituted for him in reviewing current stage offerings and his bright incisive style attracted the attention of the New York Evening World, which offered him the position of drama critic, which he held from 1887 to 1895.

In 189[illegible] he joined the Hearst organization, writing for the New York Journal and American and with exception of one brief interval his service has been uninterrupted.

FAMILY OUT AT CIRCUS, LATROBE HOME LOOTED

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 22.—While the family of Charles Laughner, of Latrobe was attending a circus, thieves ransacked their home and stole four suits of clothes and other wearing apparel.

Put An End To Eczema Tortured Skin

Remedy That Costs But Little At Any Drug Store Never Disappoints.

When your skin itches and is fiery and eczema tortures you night and day why not go to your druggist and get a 35-cent box of Peterson's Ointment?

For many years its mighty healing power has been of great benefit to sufferers from eczema and we are sure that one box will prove it to you.

Read what Temple Carter of Gary, Ind., writes—It proves what a blessing Peterson's Ointment is for skin troubles.

"My whole face was ruined with livid splashes, blackheads and patches. I could get no relief from anything I used. After using the sample box of Peterson's Ointment the ugly skin began to disappear, so I got a box from my druggist. My skin is now like glass, smooth and clear, and I look like I did 15 years ago. With pleasure you are permitted to publish these wonderful results. I cannot praise Peterson's Ointment enough. I hope this [illegible]

BOYS AND STEED END ADVENTURE

Heroes of their boy neighbors, Louis Vierling, 11, and his brother, James, 9, of 220 Taylor street, and Robert Wise, 11, of 234 Pearl street, today were recounting what to them was an eventful week-end.

They are the boys seen plodding wearily along the Babcock boulevard Sunday by hundreds of motorists. On a boyish whim they left home Saturday, hiked to a farm near Evans City and returned with a horse belonging to the Vierling boys' father. A wide search had been instituted for them.

ALL-DAY AUTO SERVICE FOR CITY TO BE DECIDED

Plans to establish a 24-hour service in the automobile division of the Department of Public Safety will be taken up by City Council today. At present there is one clerk working an eight-hour shift for $1,400 a year. The proposed plan, said to have the support of Director Clark, includes a salary raise to $1,800 a year for each clerk.

WILMERDING SOLON HELD UNDER AUTO LAWS

Councilman Frank Kukurin, of Wilmerding, will be given a hearing Monday night by Justice of the Peace C. H. Reinhard of McKeesport on charges of violating the automobile laws. Kukurin, chairman of Wilmerding council's police committee, was arrested Saturday with his son, Peter, 18, by state highway patrolmen. The two face six charges of violating the state motor laws.

HOPE TO BRING TEITELBAUM'S BODY HOME

William Teitelbaum, 62, formerly of Pittsburgh, American peacemaker between warring factions in Mexico, whose death in Mexico City Sunday morning was reported as suicide, will be buried by United States authorities and with the American flag in his grave in his native soil, if the wishes of his relatives here are carried out. Furnishing his own resources, Teitelbaum worked in Mexico throughout the World War in efforts to promote amicable relations between that country and the United States.

Mrs. Regina Teitelbaum, of Darlington road, sister-in-law of William Teitelbaum, said today that her family had heard only vague reports from Mexico regarding his death and a complete investigation will be demanded by the United States authorities.

Tender Aching FEET

Bathe Them in "TIZ"

The minute you put your feet in a "Tiz" bath you feel the pain being drawn out and comfort just soaking in. How good your tired, swollen, burning feet feel! "Tiz" draws out the poisons that cause tender, aching feet. Takes all the soreness out of corns and callouses, too. Get a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store for a few cents and keep your feet fresh, sweet and comfortable.

FORM !PLUS!

Golfers realize how essential form is to the game. They recognize, too, that correct attire makes for a more thorough enjoyment of this favorite pastime. Golf clothes, with comfort and ruggedness the primary feature—yet with studied smartness—are offered through The Sun-Telegraph advertising columns now. Make your selections from them.

"Joy of Living"

FULL of the "Joy of Living", are healthy little girls and boys. Clear-eyed, rosy-cheeked. Happy! And Heinz Rice Flakes are the kind of food that keeps them so.

First of all, this delicate new cereal tastes so good. Crispy; crunchy; like golden-brown nutmeats.

But it's "so good" for another reason, too! For Heinz Rice Flakes are naturally "laxatized" by an entirely new process in cereal-making. This process was developed and is owned exclusively by Heinz. It so utilizes the natural roughage of the rice itself as to impart to the flakes the qualities of a mild, natural laxative.

The whole family will respond to the new taste-thrill of Heinz Rice Flakes. And Heinz Rice Flakes will respond to the needs of the whole family by helping Nature to keep them in the pink of health—full of the "Joy of Living".

DR. FISHER

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Jackson Fisher, former Presbyterian leader and teacher and author, has died in his home, 5611 Kentucky avenue. Dr. Fisher was aged 80.

SAFETY DRIVE CURBS CITY'S JAYWALKING

Pedestrians are becoming more alert and there is less "jaywalking" in downtown streets, it was declared by the better traffic committee in reporting the progress of its safety campaign to prevent traffic accidents. The majority of the people are co-operating with the committee and are obeying the injunction to cross thoroughfares only at street intersections, this rule being the key to the committee's educational work. Today theatrical stars, a cowboy band and a vigilance committee assisted Chief Richard L. Smith, of the fire department, in directing traffic and in demonstrating safe and sane use of the streets.

Baseball players from the Pirates and the Cubs will help things along by traffic directing during the noon hour Thursday. Talks on the observance of Pedestrian Week are being given at the various luncheon clubs.

JUST SAY SUN-TELE TO THE N EWS BOY AND GET REAL NEWS

Sometimes I wonder why I dream
Of mountains made of Tech Ice Cream
And Ices, too, all piled up high
Until their goodness meets the sky!

I guess it's 'cause Tech tastes so good
That I'd eat "mountains" if I could.
I know it's very good for me
For mother says it is, you see.

She says that Tech is nour-ish-ing
And makes me strong and ev'rything—
So that is why I lie and dream
Of mountains made of Tech Ice Cream!

Raggedy Fights to Save a Cur Dog and Emily Knows Blood Counts

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and her younger sister, Kitten, are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Emily loses her heart to Kent Rossiter, but Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Her poverty prevents her from mingling with the socially elect. Unable to go to the high school picnic she wanders to a mountain and Marty, who meets her, risks his life to gather some leaves for her. She forms a friendship with rich Mrs. Frances Haiden, interior decorator, who talks to her about beauty and color, and presents her with a dress. Emily makes frequent visits to her. Kent's father rebukes Stephen Day for making trouble at the factory. He predicts a future for Emily, who feels greatly encouraged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"THESE boys' daddy is like that. He lives in a family where there's a little girl 5 or 6 years old. And they tell how she was walking on the wall above the river and he barked and jumped around her—did everything to get her back. Then what he'd been afraid of happened; she slipped over.

"Well, the dog caught her dress in his teeth. He couldn't pull her back but he could brace himself and hold her. Their jaws are like steel, you know.

"They found the two of them four hours afterward. The dog was all in but the girl wasn't hurt. He didn't care for himself, you see; only about coming through. That's the thoroughbred for you."

Emily put her cheek down on the rough head and the dog muzzled her neck, holding up a great paw to shake hands. "Darling," she kept whispering. "You beautiful thing!"

Marty watched under his brows—saw the dog lap her ear, finally stretch his muzzle upon her open palm and roll himself up with a little grunt of content.

"They're one-man dogs, Em. If they take a liking to you it lasts as long as they live and they never feel the same about anybody else." Now he called, but the puppy opened one merry eye and wouldn't move.

Marty got up finally and stood looking down. "Listen, Em, do you want him? I've got the other one. Be a good friend to you, he will."

"But—oh, you mean you're giving him to me? Why, he's valuable isn't he?"

"Not too valuable for you. You like him?"

"Do I! Well, you shouldn't—but I do love him so. Such a person, he is—"

Mrs. Day came out and the dog opened his mouth in a great, white-toothed yawn. That set them all laughing and Emily said, catching her breath, "He's mine, mother. Marty gave him to me. He's a thoroughbred—a dog gentleman—"

Agnes replied, quickly, "Say nothing of that to your father, then, dear. Well, you'll come in to lunch, Marty? It's on the table."

He refused and looked at Emily; when she said, "Yes, Marty, do," he followed them in, hot with embarrassment, and choked on the very strong tea Agnes insisted upon giving him.

This is how it happened that Marty began to appear at the Day home. He would go for a tramp up the hill with his Airedale bounding about his feet, and stop, casually, to inquire about the dog's brother.

Then Emily would bring Raggedy and put him through his tricks; make him sit up and beg for a bit of sugar or crouch with his nose on his paws as if he were praying.

"I didn't suppose any animal could know so much," she would declare all excitement. "Why, if you scold him he'll come up and offer his paw just as much as to say, 'It's all right; I'm sorry and now let's forget and be friends.' There's almost nothing he doesn't understand."

"Oh," Marty would answer with an air of settling everything, "that's blood. Can't get away from it—from blood."

Emily talked it over with Mus one day. "Do you think it makes so much difference with people? Blood, I mean? What is an aristocrat and how are they different from others?" She almost said "from us." "Is one an aristocrat because he knows who his great-great-grandfather was?"

"That seems to be important, baby. The idea of going far back—if a grandfather came over in the Mayflower it seems to be awfully important. I don't know why. They were mostly poor, I guess, those that landed in the wilderness and began to build homes for themselves. Sometimes I fancy they'd be pretty surprised at seeing themselves held up as a sort of standard. They were just folks from all I've ever been able to learn, and hard workers.

"Now it isn't considered aristocratic to work hard. I don't know, dear—can't understand—"

And Emily didn't know and couldn't understand.

CHAPTER V.

ONCE she took Raggedy for a walk and encouraged him to run on ahead, thrilling to his fine air of pride, the way he held his head back and glanced importantly down his nose, his manner of pausing and standing like a statue, fore-foot lifted.

Oh, a noble fellow, that Raggedy! And he was hers. A gorgeous, thoroughbred creature, who gave her all there was of loyalty, loved her with every beat of his valliant heart. Just an ordinary person, she was; just Emily Day. But Raggedy was blue-blooded.

Now a little dog of no special breed or claim to charm ran out of a yard and began yapping. Raggedy whirled, teeth bared, gave his challenger a speculative look. And turned his head on one side as he trotted away quite as if the cur didn't exist.

It was so human, such a complete snub, that Emily shook with laughter. She called, "C'mere, dog! So that's how you feel! Well, that's right, old fellow—be exclusive. He'd carry a dinner-pail, that one. He's not your sort."

But here a wail of terror brought her about and she saw the Brent dog, big lumbering creature, setting upon the cur. Raggedy also saw and, puppy though he was, crouched for an instant with his nose down, muscles quivering under his wiry coat. It is said the airedale has got a sizeable distance away from his ancestor, the wolf, but none who has seen him about to spring into battle believes that.

Raggedy sprang — reached for the deadly throat hold. But the Brent dog jumped backward, slashed out with his jaws, and the airedale's blow glanced off. He rolled over in the dust two or three times and raced on up the hill, tail down, yelping, while the small dog scuttled to cover.

Raggedy came back to Emily, stepping high, though a line of red trickled across his paw. She knelt down in the road with her arms around him, face against his strong neck.

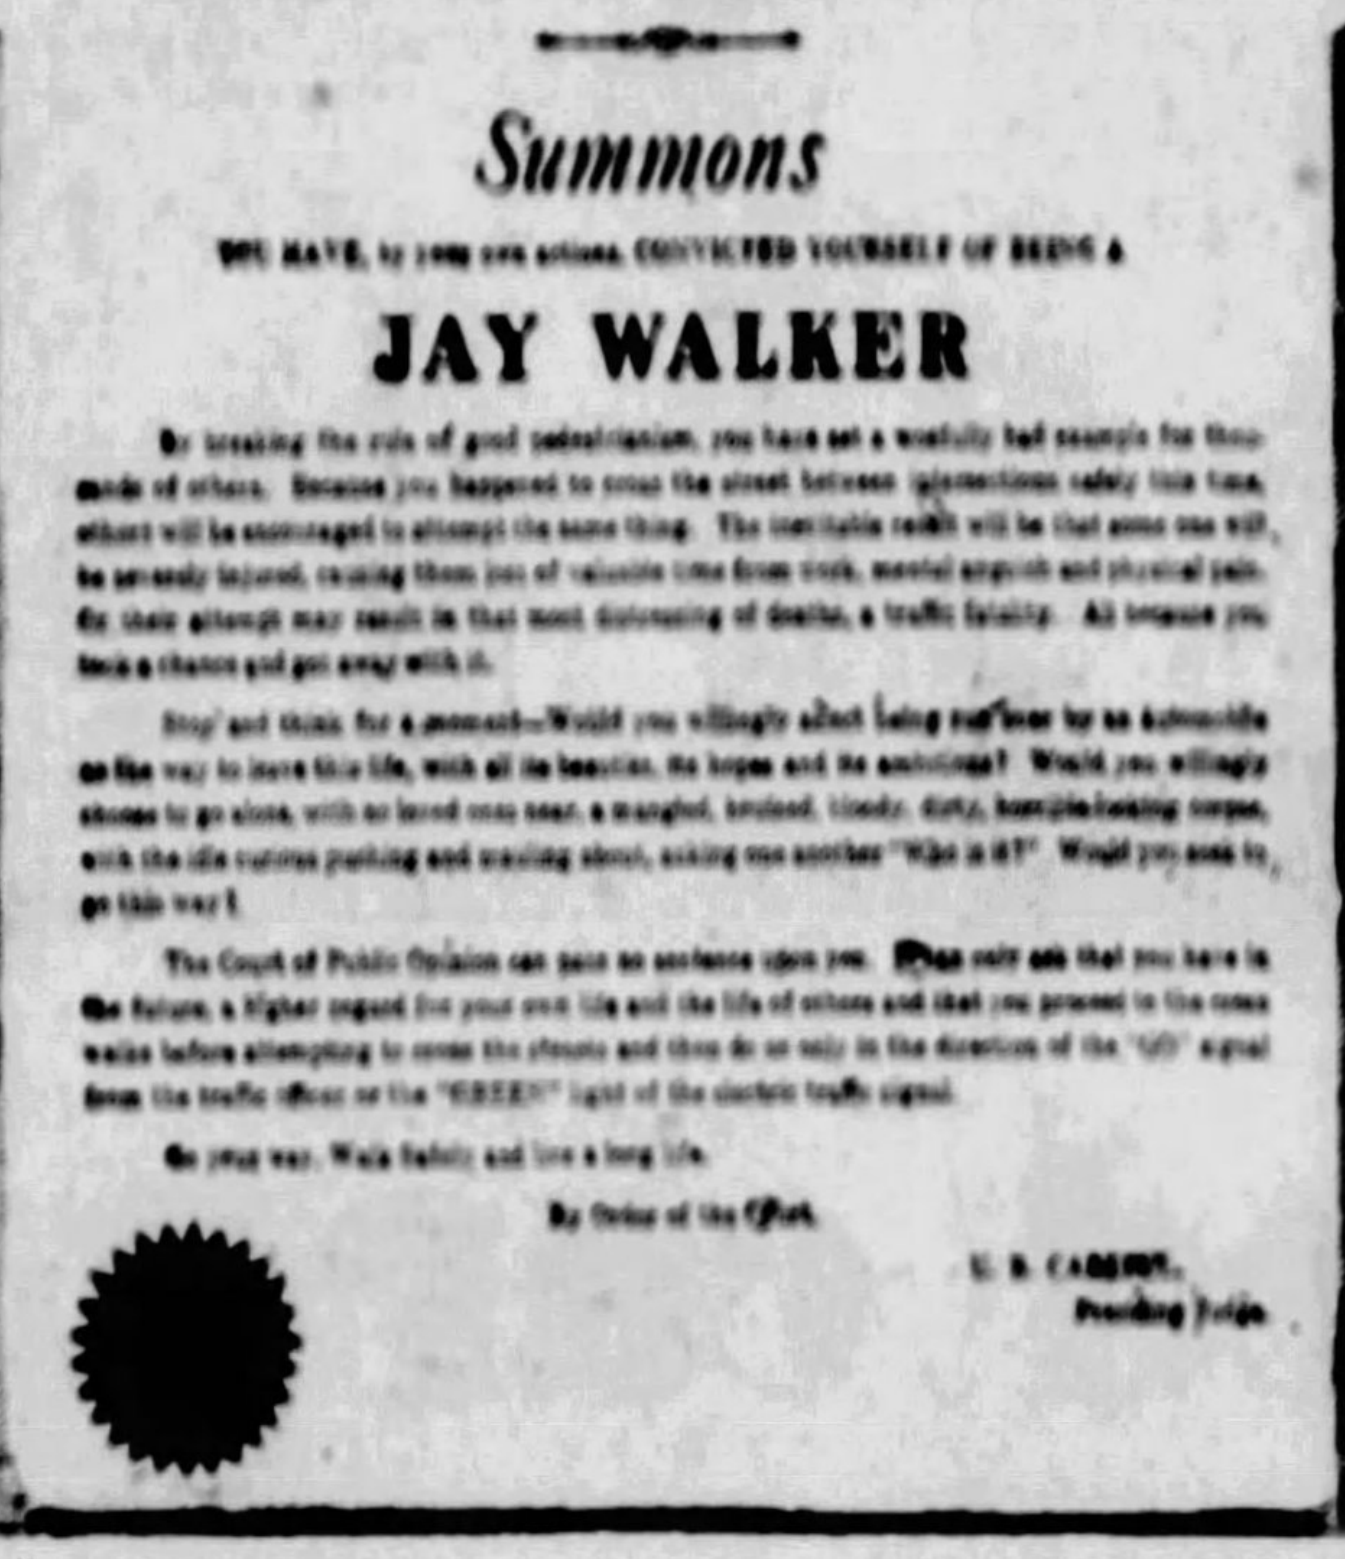
"All for that wretched little mongrel—oh, Raggedy! He's Em's brave lamb! Let her see, now—oh—"

It seemed terrible that his beautiful body should be injured. She gathered him up and tried to carry him but he squirmed out of her arms and went limping along.

When they came to Frances Haiden's shop she took him inside and asked for a bandage. "All for a no-account little cur, it was," she explained. "He saved it from a big dog and now he's hurt."

(To be Continued Tomorrow.)

PEDESTRIAN? -:- Watch Out for the 'Undertakers' -:- "I'M CAREFUL?"



COURT OF PUBLIC OPINION

Summons

JAY WALKER

SHE'S CAUGHT

When "undertakers" — gloomy fellers with long whiskers and tall hats—"took" Pittsburgh in promoting Pedestrian Week, Mrs. Kate Minkin was "caught." She received as others a summons—a real summons. Pittsburghers, say the "undertakers," should join The Sun-Tele's "Just Kids" Safety Club (see comic pages).

SUMMONS

This for the indiscreet pedestrian who would attempt to cross a downtown street in the middle of a block. It's what the "undertakers" were distributing so promiscuously to break Pittsburgh's "bad habits." You might get one.

PREPARED

This chap, as many others, was "caught" crossing where he shouldn't have crossed. He carries his own flowers, he says, so that he can cross anywhere he pleases. Pedestrian Week is to continue until May 28, by which time Pittsburgh is supposed to know better.

MAIL FLIER PLUNGES TO DEATH

RICHMOND, Va., May 22.—(AP.)—Pat Morrissey, pilot of a northbound mail plane, crashed to his death near here early today when his plane developed motor trouble and went into a tail spin.

The plane had just left the Byrd airport here and it appeared as if the pilot was turning back to this port when the accident happened.

Morrissey was en route to Washington and Philadelphia, from Richmond. Into his plane had been loaded mail from local points and cities on the New Orleans-Atlanta route.

He was flying a biplane of the Pitcairn Aviation Company.

His death was the first fatality on the New Orleans-New York airmail route, opened May 1.

BELIEVE WEST NOT HARMED

County detectives were skeptical today that L. W. West, missing Homestead contractor, had been harmed, despite the finding of blood-stained garments in his automobile.

The handkerchief and hat found in the car, which was found abandoned in Munhall Saturday, were taken to detective headquarters today to be held as evidence in event developments show West was a victim of foul play. Mrs. West, 238 Eighth avenue, Homestead, has heard nothing of her husband, she says.

DO YOU KNOW HIM?

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

Dost know by sight this man? Perhaps you do, perhaps you don't, and if you do perhaps you're wrong. He's a possible candidate for the presidency of the United States as convention dates draw nearer. There isn't here the slightest hint of his identity. The Sun-Telegraph is printing a series of "possible candidates," Democratic and Republican and otherwise, always withholding the name until the following day. This man's name tomorrow!

MONDAY'S "POSSIBLE CANDIDATE" WAS NORMAN THOMAS, SOCIALIST.

AREA HELD DISEASE SPOT

"We are in a worse condition than the striking miners or those in the flood districts."

In that way Vivian S. Danielson described the situation of residents who live in Haslage street, North Side. Without water, without gas, without the benefits of city sewers.

For over 7 months the residents of that street, most of them working-people, trying to pay mortgages on homes, have tried to beat a combination of nature and neglect on the part of the city officials.

Most of them, in a last-minute appeal to Council, apparently have decided it cannot be done.

An apparent slide or sinking of the new fill in the street has blocked every convenience he could get through the municipality, although his taxes continue as high as usual, M. J. Berrar told Council in a letter yesterday. The same letter, he said, was sent to Director of Public Safety Edward G. Lang on March 25 without action.

The case was called to the attention of Council weeks ago, with the usual result of appeals without the aid of political leaders. Nothing has been done.

"Insanitary" — "Inconvenient"— "Unsafe"—"Poisonous"—"Dangerous"—"Filthy."

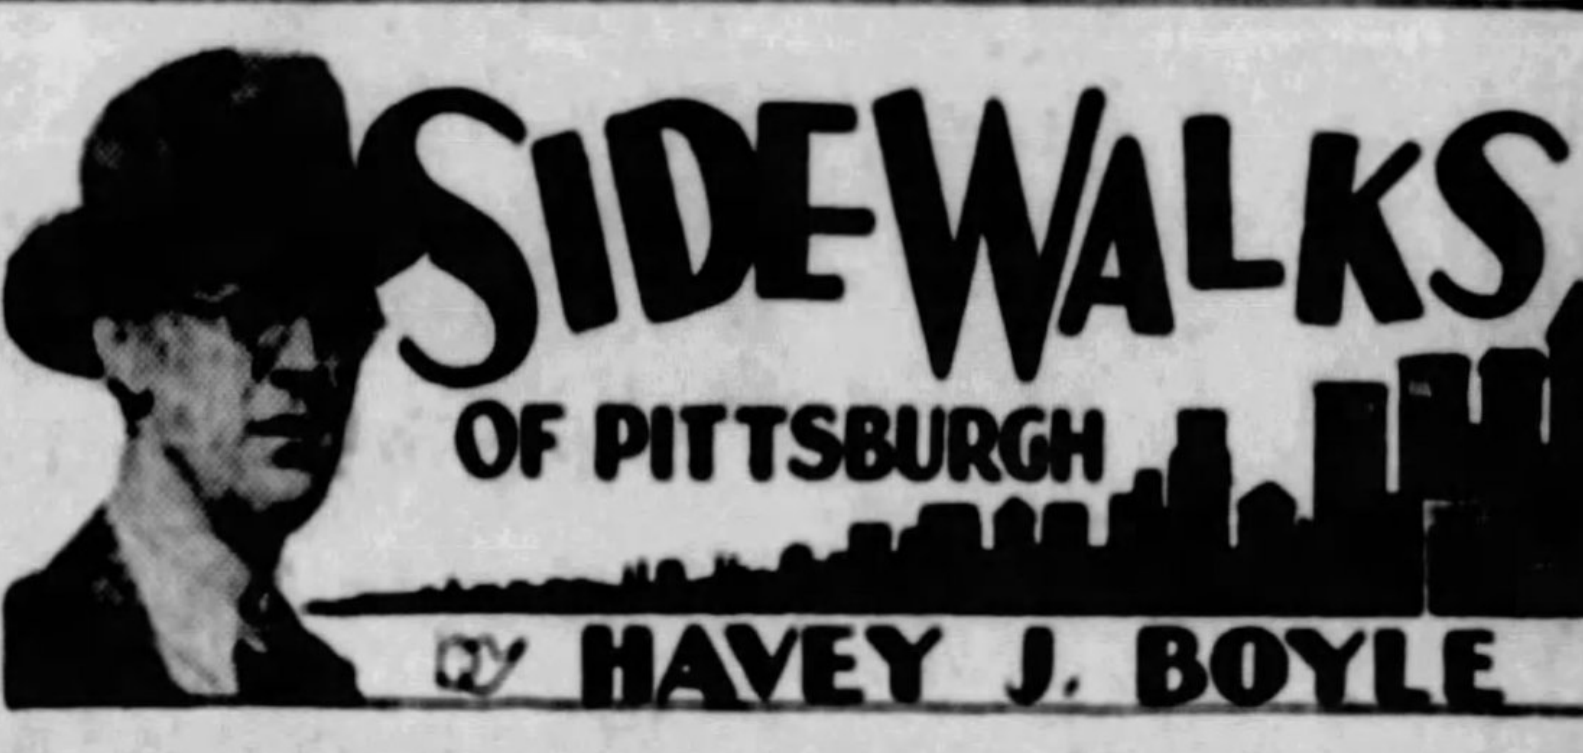
SENIORS AT ST. JOHN TO PRESENT PLAYLET

The senior class of St. John the Baptist High School will present "Missing Molars" Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings at 8:15 in the school auditorium, Liberty avenue and Thirty-sixth street. There will be matinees Thursday at 2:15 and Friday at 3:30. The production is under the direction of Madeleine Skelly.



SIDE-WALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

IN A recent paragraph here this writer, in describing a certain train, said that the club car was on the rear. It develops it must have been two other cars, because Lou and Tom, two veteran trainmen, as they point out by citing a service of some 40 years, write in to say that in their long experience they never have seen a club car on the rear of any train. The club car, Lou and Tom point out, is always the first Pullman of the train, directly after the engine. The error is hereby admitted. The car in question was an observation car, but it looked so [illegible] a club car that we slipped into error. Thanks for flagging us.

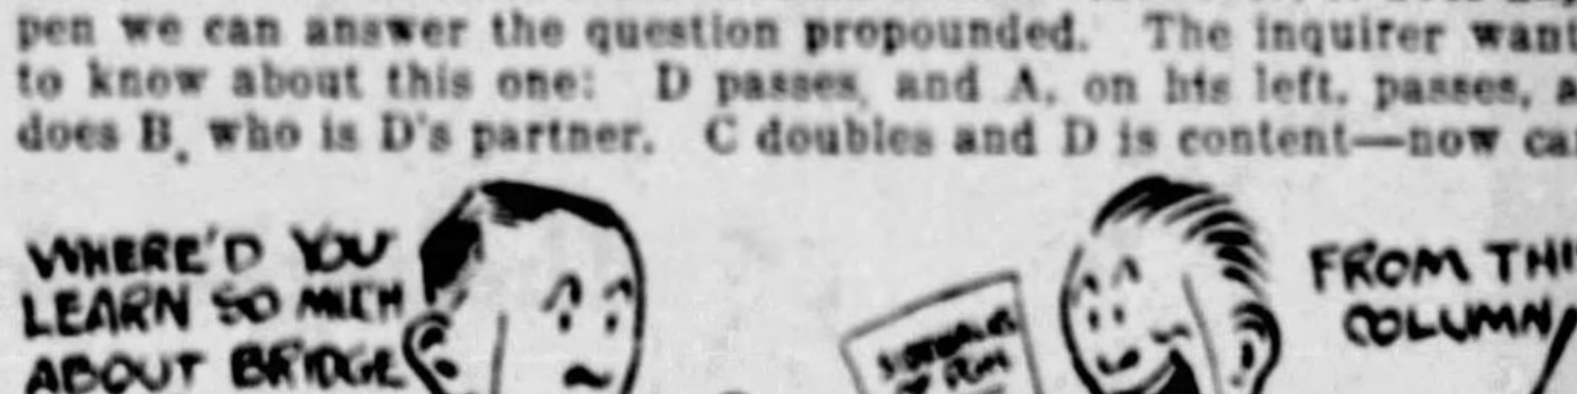
Now ordinarily we might pass up such a correction as submitted by Lou and Tom. Letters that point out errors we read and hastily tear up so the boss does not get a look at them, but Lou and Tom signed their letter: "Two readers who think you are the most interesting writer in the newspapers today." and so in all fairness we must take note of their correction. Incidentally, this boost will partly even up for the other fellow who wrote in recently suggesting we take up plastering.

• • •

THE office boy or someone else hands out a subtle compliment. A letter addressed to the bridge editor finds its way to this desk. We must shrink from such an honor. However, it does happen we can answer the question propounded. The inquirer wants to know about this one: D passes, and A, on his left, passes, as does B, who is D's partner. C doubles and D is content—now can A make a bid. He can. The bidding is not over until after D rests content, and both A and B pass. The bidding stops only after three successive passes after a bid. A double is a bid.



WHERE'D YOU LEARN SO MUCH ABOUT BRIDGE ?
FROM THIS COLUMN !

"Is there no end to this man's cleverness?" we can hear thousands of bridge players whispering in hushed and awe-filled voices.

If Dr. Work ever happened to read how we can solve such knotty problems he'd turn green with envy. To those who don't play bridge the question propounded is as easy to answer as, say, this one: "If a ball player singles does he get a hit?"

This is Pedestrian Week, dedicated to instructing pedestrians how to take care of themselves in the traffic perplexities. The traffic increase has brought about two changing states of mind. For instance, the man who owns a car and walks also changes like a chameleon. When he is driving he is convinced that the pedestrians are the dumbest set of people he ever looked at. When he leaves his car at home and walks he is convinced that he was wrong in his previous estimate and that he can safely say motorists are the most stupid and reckless group he ever ran across.

IT IS our humble opinion that accidents and worries of traffic could be decreased by common politeness. If pedestrians acted toward one another as pedestrians act toward drivers and drivers toward other drivers and toward pedestrians the sidewalks would be strewn with unconscious forms of men, women and children.

Walking along Sixth avenue, for instance, it never occurs to us to deliberately walk in front of the man ahead, grazing his elbows, or bumping him with a rough shoulder. We pass him with as much space between us as possible and pass on. If we are forced to get near him he politely moves away to avoid a collision.

BUT later in the day if we are in our car and the same man is in his machine and we meet in Sixth avenue we get the idea he is going too slow to suit us so we toot our horn and in effect say: "You big stiff, get out of the way." In walking we don't do that, but in driving we do.

• • •

If a man wanted to walk through a line in which we were standing and he said: "Beg pardon, may I get through," we'd say, "Sure," and step aside, but if the same man tried to cut through a line of automobiles at a point where our machine was standing we'd inch up a little toward the front car and make sure of blocking him.

MAY I PASS PLEASE ?
WHY SURE !

Please pass the politeness.

ALIQUIPPA MAN WINS SUIT AGAINST PASTOR

BEAVER, Pa., May 22.—James R. Henry, Aliquippa, was awarded a verdict of $1,050 against Rev. O. O. King, Aliquippa, in court here. Henry testified he was permanently injured when run down by an automobile, driven by the minister.

SALEM TWP. WOMAN ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 22.—Despondency over protracted ill health is believed to have prompted Mrs. Minnie Boering, 52, of Salem township, to shoot herself to death yesterday. She was dead when found. She clutched a revolver in her hand.

things to understand about used car allowances

1 When you trade-in your used car for a new car, you are first of all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of the new car.

2 Your used car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

3 Your used car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

4 The largest allowance is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.

5 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

6 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in the allowances offered on your used car.

SEE CONTEMPT IN SIDEWALK SELLING

Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh has asked Judge Josiah Cohen in Common Pleas Court, to summon Frank Repetty and James Spagnolo of the Spagnolo Fruit Company in the Diamond and to adjudge them in contempt of court for violating an injunction not to use the sidewalks in conducting their business.

An injunction was granted against the company November 19, restraining them from placing shelving on the sidewalks and making sales on the pavements. The stand fronts in three streets, Diamond, Drummond and Diamond square.

The court granted a rule returnable June 5.

STUDENT HELPED BACK TO HEALTH

Local Young Lady Tells How Ten Herbs Relieved Nervousness and Stomach Trouble,

"Ten Herbs has helped me beyond all expectations," was the statement of Miss Alfreda Butler, 1229 Buena Vista Street, Pittsburgh, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this great natural medicine to crowds of men and women.

MISS ALFREDA BUTLER

"Since graduating from high school, I have been a student at the Business University of Bowling Green, Ky., but due to over-study, my health became so bad I had to leave the university with only three months remaining to complete my course," Miss Butler continued. "My whole system became deranged. I was so nervous I could not sleep. I lost my appetite, and my stomach became so disordered that it would not retain anything. I became so weakened I could hardly attend classes. Constipation troubled me. My liver was inactive, and I had dizzy spells. Severe headaches would come on me and last for a week at a time.

"After returning home, I tried all kinds of medicines for my nerves and stomach, but nothing gave me any relief. Friends advised me to try Ten Herbs, and I started using it. Now I can get a good night's rest, and nervousness is fast disappearing. I can eat anything without having distressing pains. I have not had a headache, dizzy spell or billious attack since taking the second bottle, and have gained in weight. I am beginning to feel like a new person, and will soon return to the university. I am only too glad to endorse Ten Herbs to anyone suffering with nervousness or stomach trouble."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Federation of Girls' School Societies Refutes Belief Women of "400" Neither Toil Nor Spin

IT'S really surprising how many folks there are who believe that those individuals whom we call ''society women'' neither toil nor spin, in fact do nothing but play golf or bridge during the daytime and dance all night. Why should they, it might be reasoned, since they need have no worry about tomorrow's meals or next winter's fur coats?

But if these doubters had ''listened in'' yesterday when the Federation of Girls' School Societies held its annual luncheon at the University Club, they might have changed their minds. The federation's pet charity is, as you know, the home at Harmarville where convalescent women and children are cared for, and at yesterday's meeting all the various schools reported on the work they have done during the past year. Each school had its own individual share in maintaining the school, and they all work together for the one big affair of the year, the charity ball. And, by the way, next year's ball is scheduled for December 27, I understand, with Helen Leovy as general chairman.

The Farmington society's report was the most interesting, perhaps, since that group is backing the erection of the new building at Harmarville. This building will be used for the babies at the home, and it is expected to be completed late in October. According to the report made yesterday by Mrs. W. W. Blackburn, all modern improvements in hospital buildings have been included in the plans, and the home will be able to care for many more babies than at present.

After the societies had made their reports, Mrs. Maitland Alexander, as chairman of the nominating committee, read the ticket, and the nominees were elected unanimously. Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, the present president, was re-elected, with Mrs. Charles L. Snowden, Jr., Mrs. Frederick T. Billings, Mrs. Herbert A. May and Helen Leroy as her vice presidents. Geraldine West also was re-elected recording secretary; Elizabeth Telfer, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. David E. Jackman, Jr., treasurer, with Harriet Patterson as assistant treasurer. Mrs. James I. Marsh was named chairman of the house committee; Mrs. Augustus K. Oliver, garden committee, and Miss Lillian Dermitt, social service committee.

Another group representing an organization whose interests are nation-wide, rather than city-wide, left yesterday for Buffalo as the delegates from Pittsburgh to the annual Junior League conference, which begins today. Augusta Leovy, president of the local Junior League, was one of the delegates, of course, and the others were Mrs. Charles Leidy Snowden, Jr., chairman of children's plays, and Mrs. Hepburn Walker, local editor of the Junior League Magazine.

The first meeting is scheduled for this afternoon when the delegates meet the national officers in the clubrooms of the Buffalo league, and tonight there will be a dinner in the Twentieth Century Club. A motor trip to Niagara Falls is arranged for tomorrow morning, with a meeting at 10 o'clock, followed by luncheon at the Clifton House on the Canadian shore. Meetings of the national bureau will be held in the afternoon.

There will be an open forum Thursday at the Buffalo Country Club, including talks on national problems, and that night a children's play will be given at the Hotel Statler. A national board meeting Friday afternoon will close the conference.

BRIDGE, DRAMATICS -:- SAYS PATRICIA PITT -:- IN SOCIETY ACTIVITIES

MRS. DONALD PETTIT

Mrs. Donald Pettit is chairman of one of the committees for the bridge party to be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Herbert DuPuy by the Women's Auxiliary to the Kingsley House. Photo by Parry.

HELEN POMMER

Miss Helen Pommer has one of the leading roles in "The Ghost of Lollypop Bay," to be given tonight by the senior class of the Wilkinsburg High School. The play will be repeated Friday night with a different cast.

MRS. E. R. WEMBRIDGE

Mrs. Eleanor Rowland Wembridge, of the Cleveland Juvenile Court, will speak at the luncheon to be given tomorrow at the William Penn Hotel by the Social Workers' Club and the Pittsburgh Girls' Conference.

A wedding of interest to Pittsburghers took place yesterday afternoon in New York when Emilie Wright, daughter of Arthur Wright, of West Forty-fifth street, New York, and Graham Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Johnston, of Shady avenue, were married. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock in the chapel of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church by the bride's uncle, the Rev. Richard Wright, assisted by the Rev. Minot C. Morgan, co-pastor of the church.

Mrs. Harold C. Buckminster, of Boston, was matron of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. S. Davidson Herron and Frances Johnston, sisters of the bridegroom. Norwood Johnston was his brother's best man and included in the list of ushers were Edmond F. Wright, Richard L. Wright and Arthur W. Wright, all Emilie's brothers. After the service there was a reception at the Ritz-Carlton.

The young Johnstons are going to spend their honeymoon in Bermuda, and they expect to live in Tulsa, Okla., where Mr. Johnston is in the oil business.

I hear that Mrs. Harry Darlington, of "Highlawn," Sewickley, has taken her children straight on to their summer home at Watch Hill after the family landed from their recent trip to Bermuda. Mr. Darlington came back to Sewickley, however, and Mrs. Darlington will return home for the horse show early in June, I understand.

* * *

Mrs. Jonathan Brown, Jr., of Boston, who, you remember, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. James Crossan Chaplin III in Sewickley for the past couple of weeks, gave a luncheon yesterday afternoon at the Allegheny Country Club for 22 guests. White lilacs were used in the decorations, and after the luncheon there was bridge. Mrs. Brown, I believe, expects to leave tomorrow for Boston.

* * *

Among the local folks spending some time in Gotham are the Frederick G. Blackburns, who are at the Weylin, and Mrs. Donald McKaig, who has joined Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Hill at the Berkshire.

Because her father is ill, Betty Taylor, daughter of the Joe T. Taylors, of Lytton avenue, has changed the plans for her wedding to Jay Fishel Pigman, of New Haven, Conn., scheduled for tonight, and will be married very quietly at home. The hour set is 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Louise Graham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Graham, of LeRoi road, has chosen June 26 as the date for her marriage to Earle Alfred Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Brown, of New Haven, Conn. The ceremony will be performed in the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Louise Covell, who gave a bridge luncheon Saturday in her home in South avenue, Wilkinsburg, to announce the date, will be maid of honor, and Mrs. Bertrand Richardson, of Cleveland Heights, matron of honor. The other attendants will be Mrs. William Bryce McQuiston and Miss Lois Brown, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Florence Beavers, of Columbus, O. Dwight Brown, of New York, will be best man and the ushers will include Lute Owrey, of Philadelphia; Edward Williams, of Osceola; Dr. Altha Nabors, of Uniontown; Bertrand Richardson, of Cleveland Heights, and William Bryce McQuiston, of Pittsburgh.

Miss Madeline Kelly and Miss Ann McDonough, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Patricia Callaghan, of Bridgeville, will take part in the play, "Pride and Prejudice," to be given next Tuesday afternoon and evening by the senior class of Seton Hill College, in the college auditorium. Mrs. Mary Jones Sherrill is directing the cast, and the leading roles are taken by Miss Martha Raab, of Wheeling, and Miss Katherine Sleigh, of Weston, W. Va.

* * *

Miss Mary McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank McKenna, of Stanton avenue, who is a student at Trinity College, Washington, D. C., has just been chosen president of the student government of the college.

COSTUME PROGRAM GIVEN BY MT. LEBANON WOMEN

"Rythmical Notions of Many Nations" was the euphonious title given the costume program which was presented last night in the Washington school by the music department of the Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club. Bringing a breath of old Spain, a chorus sang Dupont's "La Rosita" and there was a solo dance by Norma McAdams and a specialty dance number by Helen May Slater and Helen Jean Moorhead. A scene from "Madam Butterfly" given by Rebecca Burke and a sextet visualized Japan to the audience, while Lorraine Simpson's dance was a bit of Erin Isle that the audience liked well. Czecho-Slovakia was represented by two chorus numbers, Eleanor M. Eshelman contributed mandolin numbers and, to close the evening's entertainment, came Indian numbers sung by Vincent Kroen and the chorus, a "Miss America dance" by Norma McAdams, a Negro spiritual and a jazz number.

Mrs. Lucille Miller Werner directed the program and accompanists were Oneto T. Boore and Margaret Johnston. Carol Chew was properties chairman.

The garden section of the club will meet with Mrs. W. L. Williams, McCully street, tomorrow afternoon. E. H. Stiles, landscape artist, will speak on "The Small Place."

Reports and election will be the special business to be conducted tomorrow afternoon at the Dormont-Mt. Lebanon W. C. T. U. meeting in the home of Mrs. Samuel Anderson, Tennessee avenue.

RENEWS FIGHT ON KLAN

COST OF REED CAMPAIGN FAILS TO EXCEED $11,000

HARRISBURG, May 22.—(AP.)—The David A. Reed campaign committee yesterday filed a statement of its expenses in connection with the senator's campaign for the Republican nomination to succeed himself showing receipts and expenditures totalling $5,869.92. John G. Frazier, Pittsburgh, was treasurer of the committee. Reed's personal account, showing expenditures o fmore than $5,000 was submitted some time ago.

EX-KNIGHT ASKS STATE'S AID IN SUIT

Attorney Van A. Barrickman has resumed his fight to drive the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan from Pennsylvania. In a letter, now on its way to Attorney General Thomas A. Baldridge, at Harrisburg, he presents a petition, asking that the state intervene in the action of himself and others, in Federal district court, to have the Klan placed in receivership, or institute proceedings in the state court barring the klan.

According to Barrickman, the Federal court action of the five so-called "banished" members against the klan has not been disposed of by the court, despite general interpretation of Judge W. H. S. Thomson's opinion. In the opinion Judge Thomson said that if the klan has been guilty of lawless acts, it would not only be right, but perhaps the clear duty of the state, to revoke its license.

Additional Club News

One of the chief concerns of the one-day institute to consider "Some Urgent Protective Measures for Pittsburgh's Youth," which is to be held in the William Penn Hotel tomorrow, is the question of a woman's bureau in the police department. The Social Workers' Club and the Pittsburgh Girls' Conference, which are holding the institute jointly, will bring to the city Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, president of the International Association of Policewomen, Washington, D. C., who will discuss "How a Woman's Bureau in the Police Department Helps to Protect the City's Youth."

A program of interest has been arranged by Mrs. Mary Mulhattan for the thirty-fourth anniversary of the Curtis Home, which will be celebrated Thursday afternoon and evening. On the afternoon program will be Mrs. Sara B. Kelley, soprano; Mrs. A. B. Coheby, contralto, with Mrs. Virginia Urban, accompanist; Mrs. John Schimpf, violinist, and Mrs. J. Charles Wilson, reader. The evening program will include soprano numbers by Mrs. Frances Schreiner Lane, contralto by Mrs. Edwin E. West, accompanied by Mrs. Bertha Gross King, who will also offer piano solos and readings by Miss Leila Tappe. The advisory board members will receive informally with the board of managers following a joint meeting and supper with the children and staff.

Lovely hands . . . will they stay lovely, in spite of housekeeping cares?

A WHOLE week's "crop" of new brides—in 11 cities*—more than 1,200 of them—told us their home-making plans.

Each plan was different, of course. But on one thing these brides were agreed.

They are going to take up housekeeping as a job which requires intelligence and skill. Yet one to be filled without sacrificing charm and GOOD-LOOKS.

And 96 out of 100 of these brides have decided on one way to do this—

Because they know—from using Lux to wash their own fine things—how white and soft Lux makes their hands, they plan to use only Lux for all DISHES, all cleaning their hands have to do.

As experienced housekeepers know, many household soaps—flakes, chips and cakes—are made in the old-fashioned way. They contain harmful alkali that dries up the skin, coarsening and aging it.

There is no injurious alkali in Lux. Made by a remarkable process—Lux actually SOOTHES the skin, leaves it whiter and softer than before.

And instant, sparkling Lux suds are so rich and cleansing that the dishes seem almost to wash themselves! Lux for dishes COSTS LITTLE, because the big package washes six weeks' dishes! Lovely hands for so small a price!

These cities are—Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Providence, Denver, Cincinnati, St. Louis.*

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

"DOUBLING" FOR THE WIFE

SOME day we are going to discover that being a wife is not a picnic or an avocation, but a great profession. A profession requiring skill, science, hard application and natural ability.

* * *

Some day there is going to be a brand new and profitable business for women in the job of "substitute wife."

* * *

Many an overworked Tired Business Woman would be delighted today if she could find a reliable substitute to "double" for her in the role of wife.

HELEN ROWLAND

Somebody to do all those things which the Tired Business Wife ought to do, wants to do—and never finds TIME to do!

You can hire a housekeeper to feed your husband and take care of his clothes; but what the busy wife would like to find is somebody to watch his diet, see that he takes his tonic and set his alarm clock.

* * *

Somebody to remind him to write to his mother, put the studs in his shirt, wipe his razor and tell him when to get his hair cut.

* * *

Somebody to meet him at the station when she is detained at the office, and greet him at the door with a bright, glad smile and a cry of joy when he comes in evenings.

Somebody to find his slippers, fetch his smoking coat and see that he changes his wet socks when he comes in after a rainy day—while his wife is creaming her face or getting into her evening gown.

* * *

Somebody to wait up for him when he stays out late nights and listen to his alibis when he returns—while his wife gets a full night's sleep.

Somebody to go around to musical shows and revues and prize-fights with him—while his wife goes to see a GOOD play or gets in some improving reading.

Somebody to liven up the dinner conversation, fix his salad and pour his coffee—when his wife is out at a committee meeting or "all in" after a hard day's work.

* * *

Somebody to listen sympathetically while he tells of his troubles at the office, keep an eye on him at parties to see that he doesn't imbibe too much, and keep him out of draughts at all times.

* * *

Somebody to coddle him, amuse him, worry about him, wait on him, jolly him, restrain him and bully him—somebody, in short, to do EVERYTHING that a strong man needs except inspire him and LOVE him!

* * *

This is the next profession which women will probably take up. Because being a wife is a WHOLE TIME job—and the Tired Business Woman will have to find somebody to be a wife to her neglected husband!

ENVY IS BLIND

Each Wants What the Other Enjoys

"Tell Envy, when she would annoy,
That thousands want what you enjoy!"
GAY.

PRETTY lass with the quaint hair, the tight bodice, the fluffy frock-dansant, the round, innocent face, the rose for flirtation and small pearls for ornaments, don't you know that half your charm—oh, YOU don't think you're charming?—you owe to being a type? Flowers in their variegated colors and shapes hold half the secret of their seduction. If women were all alike and never changed 'twould be a rusty, dusty world. Even if those millions of women all alike were beautiful. Yes, sir! And don't you know that the lady along the satin cushion wants many of the things you have? YOUTH, simplicity, quaintness, the freshness of the rose you carry, and—YOUTH.

Clever, worldly-wise lady with the sophisticated locks, the witty mind, the swift repartee, the showy pearls for ornament, the gorgeous fan for your flirtation, the violently-colored frock made of a shawl, you know better, don't you, than the demure pussy, all fluffed up with sorrowful envy, that you owe your charm to your colorful type? And still, knowing, surrounded by laughing blackbirds, you sigh in your heart for the fresh youth of the demure pussy's face, the wonder in her eyes, her ability to match the flower in her smooth fingers without effort! While the pussy is wanting your world poise! The colorful lady, with her three-to-one admirers, envies the pussy her ONE, for his sincerity and his obviously fatal Love-wounds.

The kitten in the other nook, with her devoted ONE, envies the colorful lady the profusion of her devotees and their witty worldliness.

And we, who like our flower beds variegated and multi-hued and shaped, we look at one mademoiselle for one thing and the other for another.

We don't say which we would choose to wear in our buttonhole for life. But when you come to that, gentlemen are not all the same sort of choosers! So everybody's happy—including Ole Dan Cupid. — NELL BRINKLEY.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, May 23

THE sidereal operations for this day seem to conflict in their influence. While there is a degree of activity indicated, with encouragement for new undertakings, and with those in places of power under benignant rule, yet the financial outlook seems hazardous and there are other testimonies of disappointment and obstruction. Be careful in handling funds. Personal matters assume pleasant aspect.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of success and advancement in employment or in new ventures, but are enjoined to be very careful in safeguarding their money. Avoid all of a speculative nature. Personal affairs will afford many pleasant and profitable experiences.

A child born on this day may be versatile and accomplished in many directions. It should succeed in employment or in business, but should shun avenues for financial hazards.

Stop Indigestion Before It Stops You

Indigestion is dangerous.

That mass of fermented food in the stomach forms gas and creates an acid condition which, by its very nature, only gets worse. Don't neglect it. Ulcers may form.

Two things should be done for indigestion—and at once. The harmful acid should be removed and the inflamed stomach lining protected.

Bi-nesia does both. It instantly neutralizes acid, stops fermentation, sweetens the stomach, prevents gas and forms a healing, protective coating of bismuth over the delicate stomach lining. There's nothing better.

Don't take chances with indigestion. You can remove the actual cause of the trouble and enjoy your meals again with the aid of pure, harmless Bi-nesia. All druggists sell tablets and powder for only 50 cents and guarantee unconditional satisfaction.

Physicians Advise HEMO-LIVER for Weak, Run Down Men and Women

Full of the Newly Discovered Substances Extracted From Liver Which Create Rich Blood and Strengthen Vital Forces

Hemo-Liver is the new sensational tonic extract of liver they are all talking about these days. Doctors are advising weak, anemic thin-blooded people to take Hemo-Liver and it now can be obtained from any druggist who keeps abreast of the times, with the distinct understanding that if one bottle doesn't improve your health wonderfully—the purchase price will be returned.

A big 12-ounce bottle of Hemo-Liver lasts 8 days, one tablespoonful is a dose, and as one doctor remarked, "You would have to eat liver a great many times to get as much of the rich red blood-making vigor-creating elements as Hemo-Liver will give you.

"Men and women who are suffering from lowered vitality, general weakness, overwork, nervous breakdown or anemia can put their faith in Hemo-Liver. For feeble old people, girls 13 to 18, and in convalescence, it is invaluable. It strengthens the nerves, increases the red blood cells, promotes health and rebuilds weakened vital forces of both men and women so quickly that often physicians are astonished."

As a spring tonic it surpasses old-time remedies.

Get a bottle of Hemo-Liver today at May Drug Co. Stores or any good druggist.

Common Sense Treatment of Boils Is Important

ANEMIA, kidney disturbances, diabetes and a general run down condition are rarely uncomplicated ailments. What we call "secondary diseases" may result. One such thing is known as boils.

DR. COPELAND

These disagreeable visitors may come in "crops," or they may come singly. But no matter how they come they are equally painful. They may attack any part of the body. As a rule, however, they are found commonly on the neck, face, arms, buttocks and legs. One of the most painful of the small boils is in the ear or the nose.

Germs are such common things and so readily find entrance to the body that you will not be surprised when I tell you that a germ is the cause of boils. Usually persons with lowered vitality and poor general health are the ones most susceptible to boils. This is because their resistance is lowered and there is no vitality to fight and destroy the watchful germs.

The difference between a boil and the ordinary abscess or infection, is that the boil always has a "core" or hard center. That is characteristic of the typical boil.

Suppose you have a boil—what do you do about it? Many persons make the grave mistake of squeezing the boil all the time. This is the wrong thing to do. Every time you squeeze a boil you break down the surrounding tissues, allowing the infection to spread.

I do not mean that boils should not be opened to allow the puss to come out. I do mean, however, that continued opening and squeezing is harmful.

If you are a victim of boils there is much you can do for yourself. Make sure you are not constipated—keep the bowels open. Avoid excessive use of fats, rich pies and pastries and condiments. Drink plenty of water and lemonade.

If more than one boil occurs or, for that matetr, if you have a single one, you must make sure there is no underlying condition. Have the urine examined to make sure you have no kidney complications.

In short, take an inventory of your health. Wherever you find something missing which good health requires, set about correcting the defect. That is good advice always and it is particularly true of this simple ailment.

Some time I will say more about boils, but in the compass of this short article are a number of suggestions which I hope may prove helpful. The skin is a sort of mirror of the vital organs. If it is not clean and clear, something is wrong somewhere. Do not disregard these outward and visible signs of an internal disturbance.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Blondie

DEAR MISS GALE!

I am a steady reader of your column and I think your advice is wonderful. Now here is my problem. I am a girl in my teens and I'm popular with both boys and girls and I'm good-looking. People tell me I'm the prettiest girl in our town. I met a boy about a year ago and ever since we met, he calls me "sweetheart" every time he sees me. Now, Miss Gale, how can I win his friendship? I'd like to be his steady girl friend. He has none yet for his brother told me that he's always at home in the evenings. I like him very much, but I'm a little bashful when I meet him. Shall I invite him to the house or shall I wait till he asks me for a date? Would I do right if I would date with him? He has no father nor mother. Does it matter if a girl pets or kisses after she's engaged? How old must a girl be to get married?

BLONDIE.

It is a girl's privilege to invite a boy to call, but if this one calls you "sweetheart," he is not too bashful to ask you for a date if he really wants one. I would wait for him, if I were you. An engaged couple may kiss each other, of course. A girl should wait until she is 20 before thinking of marriage.

Diane

DEAR MISS GALE!

I am a girl in my teens and am considered very good looking and enjoy all sorts of sports. I have come to you for advice. I am deeply in love with a boy two years my senior. I have known and gone out with him for quite a while. My parents do not object to his visits, as they think he is the type for me. One night we had a double date. The fellow that was with the other girl paid much attention to me that night. My regular boy friend did not like it, but I tried my best to treat them equally. My boy friend made a date with the other girl friend and she let me know he did it only to make me jealous. A few weeks later he wrote me a letter asking for my forgiveness, telling me he couldn't go on the way he was. He said it was only jealousy. He said he loved me more than ever for being such a good sport. Please, Miss Gale, how shall I treat him, as I love him dearly. Please don't tell me to forget him, for I can't.

DIANE.

Forgive him, of course, my dear, and let him come to see you again.

Am Blue

DEAR MISS GALE!

Have been reading the wonderful advice you give to other people in trouble; now I have come for some myself. Miss Gale, this is my problem. I have been going with a girl four years my senior, and I love her dearly, but because of her age my family objects to my going to see her. What shall I do?

AM BLUE.

Your own age has a great deal to do with any advice I could give you. If you were 30, the four years would be no bar to your friendship, but a girl of 22 is a lot older than a boy of 18. If I were you, I should listen to the advice given at hhome.

What Should Your Blood Pressure Be?

Doctors often figure normal blood pressure by adding 100 to a person's age. If a test shows it to be abnormally high, a dangerous condition is indicated.

High blood pressure means that the blood stream and system are loaded with body poisons. Yet it is a condition which can be corrected pleasantly with Lithuric Salts. Composed only of valuable, natural mineral salts and fruit acids, effervescent, palatable Lithuric Salts quickly reduces blood pressure by gently but thoroughly flushing the intestines, stimulating the liver and assisting the kidneys. In Lithuric Salts you will find not sodium chloride or sugar, making it perfectly harmless to take even in diabetic conditions. If your blood pressure is high, get a bottle of Lithuric Salts today on our "satisfaction or money back" guarantee. The May Drug Co. Stores and other good druggists sell and recommend it.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

by FRANK L PACKARD

The Night Before Bob Is To Sail Ruffians Break In

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley, once a dashing sea-faring adventurer, is picked up in a fragile craft by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Mute evidence on the body testifies to the fact that the man died in a struggle. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives the various articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reasons to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy of the Kingsley family, has returned after thirty years to seek vengeance.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER X.

BOB KINGSLEY sprang out of bed.

"Damn it!" he growled. "It's the French windows, and something's blown over!"

He groped his way across the room and stepped out into the short hallway that ran past his father's room to the living room entrance a few feet farther on.

Here a current of air blew strongly into his face. There was no question but that the French windows were open. He quickened his pace, guiding himself in the darkness with his hand along the wall. The wind was making queer noises now—like a rustling, like a strange swirling, as though a curtain was flapping against some object and was in constant motion.

Half-running he burst into the living-room—and then, with a sharp, involuntary cry, stood stock-still for an instant. But only for an instant. The French windows were open, right enough; but it wasn't the wind that had blown them open. It was intensely dark—so dark that he might well have attributed the existence of those white wavering shapes there scarcely two yards away from him to being only the product of his own imagination, had not a low, startled cry of warning come from one of them.

And Black Bob Kingsley answered that cry in the only way he had ever been known to answer anything of a like nature. He had mistaken a rotten lot of native thieves for the wind! There was a grim smile on his lips as that thought flashed through his mind—and with a single spring that placed his back to the French windows and blocked the exit, he was upon them, the great fists of the man lashing out around him, striking furiously at what seemed in the darkness no more than squirming, misty, ghost-like forms, save that his blows gave back the dull thud of impact as his fists drove into human flesh.

In an instant the room was in pandemonium, full of snarls, and curious squeals, and scuffling feet—and over it all rose Bob Kingsley's voice in a mighty shout repeated again and again:

"Mafi! Tamoli! Kero!"

His voice ought to carry easily across the clearing to the house servants in the native huts, and he did not propose that these pilfering housebreakers should escape! It was time that a certain rascally native element on the island had a lesson—and one that would not be forgotten. This sort of thing had happened before!

Again he shouted—but the answer came from his father's room, not from the clearing.

"What's wrong, Bob? What's wrong?" roared old Robert Kingsley; and then in a sort of impotent fury: "Damn this chair, and damn my legs! But I'm coming, lad! I'm coming!"

"Stay where you are!" Bob panted between his blows. "Fire your revolver if you like, it will help rouse our boys; but for God's sake stay where you are. There's only a few thieving swine here, and I'll——"

His breath seemed suddenly to have been knocked out of his body. Evidently in frantic fear now and with no other thought but that of making their escape as shot after shot rang out from the next room, the white shapes had made a concerted rush upon him. They forced him back a step—another—almost to the open French windows. And now they had closed upon him, hanging upon his neck and arms, striving to beat him to the ground, raining vicious blows into his face and body. He did not know how many there were—three or four or five or ten—they seemed to multiply themselves at close quarters! And some of them seemed to be rolling on the floor most curiously—perhaps to snatch at his legs and trip him up.

But his arms were around the necks of two of them now, banging their heads together—and then one he flung to the floor, and then the other. But they seemed to rise up instantly again—or was it still another two, or even three, that he was holding back now with the short-arm blows that he drove home with all his strength?

But some of his blows were wild. There wasn't any light. He could not see. He was out of luck there. They got at him too easily—got too many blows in on him. His mind was becoming a little confused—it was as though a lot of phantoms in attack kept bobbing up in front of him—and the phantoms were grunting and gasping, and making fierce, sibilant squaling noises—native phantoms, of course—but he had known that from the first—not English grunts, native grunts—and besides English didn't squeal.

Why didn't the servants from the native quarters come? They'd had time enough a hundred times over. No—perhaps not! It seemed as though he had been fighting here all night, but it was much more likely that it had been less than two or three minutes. Well, whether the servants came or not, these swine here wouldn't get away—not all of them anyway—there'd be at least one of them left to identify the rest! He would see to that, or else——

He snarled suddenly, and a fury that he had not known before was upon him. Knives now, was it! The slashed sleeve of his pajama flapped around his wrist. He was breathing hard. They would pay for that! He crouched a little—and then in a flash, like a human battering ram, he launched himself upon them, driving in his blows with a new strength born out of the elemental passion that had been aroused in him. And before his rush the white shapes seemed to lurch and stagger backward—no, they were scattering—working around behind him—he was getting too far into the room—he couldn't block the way to the veranda like this!

He sprang backward, and for a moment stood free of the ruck.

The next instant something hurtled through the air and crashed against the wall. What was it? A chair? It was a new method of attack! That last rush of his seemed to have left them with little stomach for close quarters even with their knives! Another crash against the wall! A missile of some sort fanned his cheek. And then he was conscious for a brief instant of a crushing blow upon his head, a singing in his ears, a sense of giddiness — and he pitched forward on his face unconscious.

There was a light in the room, and he found himself lying on a couch when he opened his eyes. He put his hand to his head—it throbbed as though a thousand devils with as many hammers were beating a merciless tattoo upon it—and there was a huge swelling above his right temple, but there was no blood upon his head as he drew it away. He stared around him. His father was in the wheel chair over there by the desk. The room was in confusion. A chair lay smashed to pieces on the floor. And then suddenly Bob Kingsley sat upright. He was a little dizzy, but apart from that and an aching head, quite himself—his brain anyway was clear enough. He got to his feet quickly, if a little unsteadily.

"They didn't get away, did they?" he cried out sharply. "Our fellows caught them, didn't they?"

Old Robert Kingsley swung his chair around.

"All right again, lad?" he said gruffly. "I saw it wasn't serious——but it was a nasty crack. They hit you with that old iron door-stop there. I found it on the floor beside you, and—"

"Yes, but they didn't get away, did they?" Bob interrupted sharply. "That's all that counts."

The old man laughed out suddenly, mirthlessly.

"I made it, son—d'ye understand?" he said with a sort of fierce assertiveness. "I made it from the bed to the chair, but the cursed chair got caught somehow in the doorway. Yes, they got away. By the time our boys got over, and got me cleared away there wasn't anybody in the room but you lying there stunned on the floor. The boys are out on the hunt now—but they won't find any of the lot that broke in here."

"Then I will!" said Bob savagely, and took a step toward the veranda. "There's something coming to them, and they're going to get it if we have to scour the island for them!"

"Which is exactly where you won't find them!" the old man jerked out with another mirthless laugh. "If I'd known then what I know now, I wouldn't have sent our boys out on a chase through the woods after mares' nests. But if you want to know where to look, I'll tell you—it'll be on the Monotah."

CHAPTER XI.

BOB KINGSLEY stared at his father.

"The Monotah?" he repeated in a puzzled way.

"Why the Monotah? I don't see the connection. The fellows that sneaked in here were natives. I'm sure of that."

"There's a native or two to spare on the Monotah, isn't there?" returned the old man crisply. "Her lower decks are usually full of 'em—all kinds—you can take your pick—Malay, Kling or Chink."

Bob Kingsley shrugged his shoulders.

"Everybody knows that the native passenger list on any boat in these parts doesn't leave much deck space; but that doesn't prove anything," he said a little impatiently. "I never heard of any of them coming ashore in any port on a thieving expedition."

"Nor you ain't heard it now—that is, in the sense you mean," replied Robert Kingsley with a twisted smile. "Come here, my lad, and take a look at that!" He swung his wheel-chair sharply around again, and pointed to the desk in front of him.

Bob Kingsley stepped forward across the room.

The old man was still pointing—but his hand was shaking now.

"Look in there!" he said hoarsely. "That's the way they left it! That's what they were after! They were watching us all the time."

Bob Kingsley leaned forward. The drawer that he had locked before going to bed was partially open, and obviously had been rudely forced, for the lock was broken. But for a moment he stood perplexed. The contents seemed to be untouched. The letters were there where he had left them; and there were the wrist-watch, the tobacco pouch, the revolver, the pipe, and— He drew in his breath sharply.

The two white gods were gone.

He whirled around, and the eyes of the two men met.

"They're gone!" he said.

"Aye! They're gone—and nothing else is gone!" answered the old man grimly. "'Taint hard to put two and two together, is it? D'ye understand now why I said that whoever is at the bottom of this would be found on the Monotah? The Monotah brought the mail with those two bits of ivory. No one here would know anything about them. But it was known all over down Singapore-way that they'd been found on Tom. Whoever was after 'em—and it's plain enough now somebody was after 'em, and after nothing else—must have come on the Monotah. There was no other way of getting here—no other way of anybody who could know anything about them getting here as soon as the mail."

Philip Veritzen Badgered by Lillian Into Calling a Recess From Work

AT Lillian's plaint that everybody in her neighborhood acted as if he were dead and buried, there came a flash into Philip Veritzen's eyes which I fancied spelled a piqued interest in her accusation.

"That is a most sweeping accusation," he said, "and one which I resent both for Mrs. Graham"—he bowed to me—"and for myself. But since you have made it, I must give you proof of its falsity. And I really have a guilty conscience. I have been so busy enjoying myself that I have not considered my friends as I should. But, my dear Lillian, consider me at your service until we shall have conquered your ennui."

"Philip Veritzen, M. D., raiser of low spirits!" Lillian gibed. "But I warn you I'm hard boiled. You have no cinch."

"On the contrary, I think I have your medicine right in my case," he retorted. "What you need is to have somebody 'sling a party' for you—isn't that what I've heard you call it? Behold the 'somebody' before you! I'll sling you any kind of party you name, land, sea or air, day or night. Just indicate your preference and I'll provide it for as many guests as you can name."

Lillian crossed the room and, putting her hand upon either side of his face, pulled his head down and kissed his forehead with burlesqued solemnity. Then across his bent head she sent me so expressive a wink and Cheshire cat grin of triumphant accomplishment that I almost choked in my effort to control my laughter.

"Nobody could speak fairer than that," she said, releasing him. "You always were a good egg, Phil, even if you are a twenty-minute one. And you're right. I do need a party. I've been working every day since I came down, and Madge has been busy on your stuff. I think we all need to have teacher say, 'Long recess'!"

Mr. Veritzen waved his hand apologetically toward her.

"Far be it from me to assume that title," he said, smiling, "but as far as it is in my power I freely grant 'recess,' as you so picturesquely put it. Mrs. Graham, please put all my work aside until I tell you I wish it resumed—all, that is"—he hesitated, looked at me with something very like appeal in his eyes.

"Except my work with Miss Lincoln?" I put in quietly.

His eyes flashed gratitude.

"If you could manage that," he countered, but I realized that his apparent deferred request was but the mask for a demand.

"I can manage it easily," I said decidedly, but he had no opportunity for more than a nod of grateful acknowledgement, for Lillian was speaking impetuously.

"Don't you give Madge too much tutoring of Miss Lincoln," she warned him. "I want her fresh for the party, for I know your affairs, Phil. They're strenuous, to put it mildly."

"You haven't indicated your preference, yet," he told her, and something in his inflection told me that the great impresario was unaccountably puzzled as to the sort of entertainment he should offer his old friend. In the critical, capricious world typified by Broadway he was at home, and his nimble wits could evolve the last word in novelty and beauty. But out here in the country he had no idea what to do.

"I'm not slinging the party," Lillian retorted captiously. "I'm simply craving amusement. Why don't you ask Madge? She's lived out here so long, she's part native, and she loves the place."

The War on Fat

Look about you — Note its results

For 20 years medical men have been conducting a scientific war on fat. They have been using a factor which science discovered. A certain gland food which greatly affects nutrition. They found in this gland deficiency a great cause of obesity.

A great American laboratory, years ago, embodied this factor in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them.

Now anyone can see, in any circle, how slenderness prevails. Excess fat is nowhere near as common as it was.

Users have told friends about it, and the use has grown. People are now using some 5,000,000 tablets monthly. And the joys they bring in new beauty and health are enormous.

Now fat reduction does not require abnormal exercise or diet, though moderation helps. People combat the cause. They take four Marmola tablets daily until weight comes down to normal, then desist.

Users know the reasons for results. A book in each box gives the complete Marmola formula. And fully explains how the fat loss comes in a normal and helpful way.

Don't wait longer, when so many have for 20 years enjoyed the results of Marmola. It may mean more to you than anything else you know. Go start today and let the results tell you how long to continue. You will be amazed and delighted.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1.00 a box. Any druggist who is out will order from his jobber.

New York's Most Beautiful Hands

They are the hands of Miss Annette Grandin, the most photographed hands in the world. They are so white and smooth that they can stand "close-up" reproduction. And here's the secret, according to Miss Grandin:

"I use no fancy or expensive lotions, but make a skin bleach of my own. I get three ounces of Orchard White at the corner druggist and mix it with the juice of two lemons. This makes a full quarter pint of a remarkable, and at the same time perfectly harmless, bleach. I rub a little into my hands—also my neck and face—every night, and don't worry about freckles, tan or redness. This simple mixture not only keeps the skin clear and white, but luxuriously soft and smooth to the touch.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

SAMMY MANDELL'S easy victory over Jimmy McLarnin in their bout for the lightweight championship of the world at the Polo Grounds, New York, last night merely was what the keener thinking boxing followers expected, despite the fact that there was a great hue and cry about the possibility of McLarnin flattening the champion with a wallop of the variety that stretched out Sid Terris in the first round and made McLarnin a great favorite in the Big Town.

There is nothing easier for a GOOD boxer with heart to defeat than an opponent who is constantly winging for a knockout, and especially if the latter is a right-hand swinger, as McLarnin is. Jim Corbett demonstrated that against John L. Sullivan, and, more recently, Gene Tunney against Jack Dempsey, although in Dempsey's case the slugger's best punch was a left hook.

Fans will continue to get excited over every young fellow with a punch that comes along, forgetting such precedents as these wherein the boxer has made a veritable "sucker" out of the swinger.

MORE than a week ago, it was pointed out in these columns that Mandell's class would stand out in this battle. The several postponements of the battle and the weight-making difficulties of the champion did not injure his chances and he simply did what he figured to do in handing the willing young challenger a drubbing from the first bell to the last.

With this victory under his belt, Mandell gains much prestige. Hitherto he has been regarded as just an ordinary performer because he had not been seriously tested in a bout involving his championship. McLarnin, however, was highly rated by the public as a challenger with a chance to knock out the champion, so that the latter's impressive victory must elevate Sammy in the general rating of the fans.

LEO P. FLYNN, manager of Dave Shade, writes to advise us that his man is out to win the middleweight championship of the world by beating Mickey Walker if the latter will box him again, or the light-heavyweight championship if all of the middles persist in evading the issue with Dave, and proves it by adding that he has just signed Dave to box Hymie Garfunkle at Kansas City, Mo., May 29.

THEY still call him Chesty Joe. Joie Ray, I mean. The 32-year-old veteran who within the last few months has transformed himself from a broken-down miler into a marathon runner good enough to make a show of Clarence DeMar,

SYSTEM NOW IN FORCE UNFAIR

By JESS CARVER.

RESOLVED: That the handicap track and field meet, the medium through which second-rate (respectfully intended) athletes win first rate medals and prominence, must go, and a new sort of competition take it place!

For the affirmative, we have all fair-minded sportsmen. For the negative—well, it's hard to put a finger on any one supporter of the handicap system, but the fact that it is still sponsored locally by the A. A. U. and the A. M. A., indicates pretty strongly that there must be some in favor of the plan.

The local A. A. U. and A. M. A. officials have really been seeking some substitute and during the past two years, have taken special efforts to work out a new system of competition for their meets. They have been extremely careful of their handicapping, and they have endeavored at all times to conduct the meets fairly.

SYSTEM UNFAIR

From this point of observation, no handicap meet is fair. It hardly seems reasonable for an athlete, a broad jumper, for instance, who can leap a distance of only 19 feet, to be awarded a first place when he has to have five gift feet added to his real leap, while another athlete who would hide his head in shame if he ever landed less than 23 feet from the take-off board, can hardly win a place. But that is just what occurs in the handicap system.

It is not so bad in running events, this system of handing out gratis measurements or time, but in the field it is fast taking away the real kick that may be found in a track or field meet.

It is no fault of the 19-foot jumper that he cannot leap 23 feet—119 feet is his jump and if he has been jumping for any length of time, it is likely that he will always remain a 19-foot jumper. Then why should he be permitted to win first places over men who can do 23 feet?

There is one solution to the problem. A class system could be worked out, with a standard mark set for each event. Athletes capable of turning in better times, and better distances than the fixed standard—let them always be classed first and those who do not reach the set mark, should be rated second. There is no need for more than two divisions.

WOULD AID COMPETITION

The class system would certainly tend to increase the caliber of competition. Under the present handicap plan, a man who has a 10-yard handicap in the 100-yard dash or a 25 or 30-yard advantage in the mile, or gets five or six feet in the broad jump, 10 or 15 in the hammer or shot and anywheres from a foot to two or three in the pole vault, isn't going to be caught beating the mark that permits to rate these handicaps.

Under the class system, it would be the objective of every athlete to win a Class A rating, for it would be in that class, and that class only, that the gold medals would be passed out. There would be no incentive for a real athlete to seek to remain in the second division, for the competition there certainly would be strenuous in the extreme.

Following is a list of marks that might be set in each of the 15 common track and field events which would divide the classes:

TRACK EVENTS.

100-yard dash—10 2-5 seconds.
220-yard dash—22 1-5 seconds.
440-yard dash—52 seconds.
880-yard dash—2:06.
Mile run—4:55.
2-mile run—10:15.
120-yard high hurdles—17 seconds.
220-yard low hurdles—25 3-5 seconds.

FIELD EVENTS.

Hammer—135 feet.
Shot—41 feet.
Javelin—165 feet, 6 inches.
Pole vault—11 feet, 6 inches.
High jump—5 feet, 6 inches.
Broad jump—20 feet, 6 inches.
Discus—132 feet, 6 inches.

COULD RAISE MARKS

It would also be possible to provide for the raising of these records if the class of competition over a year's time warranted such a change. For example, if athletes hereabouts were consistently beating 53 seconds in the 440 or bettering 4:50 in the mile, these marks could be made a bit faster.

If this system was to be put into effect, it would do away with cases such as occurred in a 1927 meet here, when A. E. Rose, former interscholastic broad jump champion, leaped 22 feet 3½ inches and failed to get ONE place in five.

DAVIES IN DRAW.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 22.—(AP.)—Phil Tobias, New York City flyweight, fought a draw with Willie Davies, of Charleroi, Pa., in a 10-round bout here last night. Tobias weighed 115 pounds, Davies 113.

BRITISH GOLF CHAMP LOSES

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 22.—(AP.)—Roger H. Wethered, British amateur champion in 1923, today defeated J. Birnie, of Inverness, 3 up and 1 to go, in the second day's play for the British amateur golf championship.

Dr. W. Tweddell, who captured the championship last year, was eliminated, 3 and 2, by Charles O. Hezlet, runner-up in the amateur championship as long ago as 1914.

Robert Harris, of the Royal and Ancient Club, defeated J. F. Jamieson, of Port Marnock, 5 and 4.

No Americans scheduled to start today. John McHugh, of San Francisco, and two Americans who live in Paris, William L. Fiske and Harry V. Brower, make their first appearances tomorrow. Two other Americans, Joshua Crane, of Boston, and Paul Azbill, who now lives in England but comes from New Jersey, were beaten in the first round yesterday.

Pairings Set for Tourney

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

STARTING times and pairings for the first 18-hole round of the 36-hole Grogan cup match between the Highland and Shannopin country clubs, slated for tomorrow at the Highland Country Club, were announced today by the committee in charge of the first round. Play will begin at 12:30 o'clock, when George Evans, of Shannopin, and George Stanger, of Highland, tee off. In the listings there are 152 entrants, or 76 to the side. It is expected there will be several post entries and that Jack Oke, pro at Highland, will play with Charley Manning, pro at Shannopin. The pairings follow:

M'LARNIN FAILS IN TITLE QUEST

COMOROSKY SETS FAST PACE

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Joie Ray Sensation of Modern Marathon Racing—Rickard Used Poor Judgment in Scheduling of Lightweight Title Bout—Jinx Still Follows Dawson.

YOU can't figure modern distance runners. Some of them appear to be physical freaks who defy Father Time and the strain of running countless races, and there is no telling what odd form reversals they will show nor what queer turns their careers may suddenly take.

Joie Ray

When an athlete in any other line begins to decline he naturally allows for age and retrogression by seeking easier opposition, if he remains in the game at all.

If he is a fighter he meets second and third-class men in preliminaries or in main bouts in small towns; if he is a baseball player he slides into the minors or becomes an umpire, and if he finds that he has shot his bolt in football, hockey, rowing or other sports he gives up regular or active competition and becomes a sub or a coach.

CONSIDER the case of Joie Ray. Can you imagine a man, who discovers he is done as one-mile runner, turning to marathon runs, which are 26 times as long, plus 385 yards, and proving one of the modern sensations in those gruelling tests of speed and endurance.

From 1915 to 1925 Ray was the king of milers. He is a joint holder of the world record of 4:12, and ran more one-mile races under 4:20 than any other speeder that ever lived. So it must be admitted that in spite of the cockiness and seeming conceit that turned so many footracing fans against him, Joie could run a little bit.

IN recent years it looked like curtains for the once great Chicago miler. He was out of competition for a year and it was generally believed he was done. But though no longer able to show his old stuff at a mile (he is 32 now), Joie turned to the marathon game, and in his first race of that distance in Boston a month ago he finished third, but with his feet in such a sore and bleeding state that he was advised not to make a second attempt. Ray merely laughed. He said he would be heard from again in the New York-Long Beach marathon last Saturday, and predicted that he would win it in about 2 hours and 35 minutes. He made good on the prophesy, too, winning the race over such experienced marathon opponents as De Mar, Michelson and Wilson in 2 hours, 34 minutes, 3 2-5 seconds. The Olympic record is 2 hours, 32 minutes, 35 4-5 seconds, made by Hannes Kolehmainen in 1920 at Antwerp.

Tex Rickard

WHAT are you going to do with a guy like that? A man who is absolutely done as a miler, and then turns around and in two marathon races becomes a seeming world beater at 26 miles, 385 yards, simply can't be doped.

Under the circumstances, Ray can hardly be kept from being the favorite in the Olympic marathon. He and De Mar, Michelson and Hennigen are the leading candidates for the event, but now that he has proved he has the feet, the speed, the form, the racing judgment and courage and the confidence, with 18 years of running experience, Ray begins to loom up largely as this year's Olympic marathon champion winner, Uncle Sam's first since Johnny Hayes, two decades ago.

THE swiftness of the pace on Saturday may be judged from the fact that the occasion marked only the third time that Clarence De Mar has finished in third place in the 23 marathons that the 40-year-old Boston printer has run since 1911. De Mar, who finished seventh Saturday, has scored 12 marathon triumphs, including six victories in the annual Patriots' Day race in Boston.

THEY never become so wise in the sport game that they can't pull a boner or miss a guess occasionally. Even the wily Tex Rickard is no exception. It is said that Tex's own poor judgment rather than "threatening weather," which was given as an excuse, was the cause of the first postponement of the Mandell-McLarnin fight last Thursday in New York.

Joe Dawson

A poor sale of tickets is understood to have been the real reason for the postponement. It seems that it did not occur to Rickard until the eleventh hour that the gambling element which forms such a large percentage of New York fight patrons, would be making an early start for Louisville to attend the derby. Why he ever scheduled the bout for derby week in the first place is a mystery.

RICKARD has been very lucky until now. He has saved a lot of money by gambling on the weather instead of insuring his shows against rain. In 22 years of promoting, Tex has taken a chance on his luck against the weather man and the rain-insurance companies and only three times in that long period have his shows been interfered with. Jim Coffroth, another famous promoter, is an opposite example. Coffroth insured every outdoor show he ever held, and rain never fell on one of them. Jim, therefore, paid a tremendous sum in premiums for rain insurance, and Rickard never paid a nickel for such protection. He trusted to his luck and it made good for him.

IT looked for a time as if Joe Dawson, the Pittsburgh pitcher, had routed his jinx of the 1927 season, and was at last going to get some winning results from his capable pitching, but the manner in which his well-hurled game in Cincinnati yesterday was lost for him indicates that the old hoodoo is right back on his trail.

Dawson pitched well enough to have won any ordinary game, but errors by Glenn Wright and Eddie Mulligan opened the way for enemy runs that turned well-deserved victory into a tough defeat of the kind to which Dawson has been no stranger since he came to Pittsburgh.

Eddie Mulligan

BUT you won't see Mulligan pull much of that stuff. Pressed into service at second base on account of the illness of Sparky Adams, the Pacific Coast League recruit naturally was a little unsteady in his first game of the season, but that's only a briefly temporary condition. He is one of the finest fielders in the business, normally, and may be depended upon to save many more games than he loses.

Sockers Of Two Sorts

CHAMPION MANDELL RETAINS CROWN

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The harp that once through Tara's hall played lullaby music to willing and unwilling chins had a slightly sour twang this morning.

Jimmy McLarnin still wore the harp on his back as he stepped out of the ring last night after 15 rounds with Sammy Mandell, but that was only what he had planned to do, meanwhile taking a bow to left, right and center as the multitude blatted in unison. What he hadn't expected to wear was the "mouse" upon his tightly closed left eye or the vin rouge upon his upturned Irish nose, for this wasn't part of the act at all.

Neither was the fact that he saw occasion to take no bows as he went; in truth, he took nothing all evening, unless one wishes to include Mandell's inevitable left to the countenance and his occasional though authoritative right to the lobby or foyer.

As for taking the lightweight title away from Mandell, that prospect became an absurdity from the moment they exchanged their first grimace—for the benefit of the cloak and suit men, 20,000 in round numbers when they started. They were also round at the finish, only this time they were round-shouldered with remorse. As a fight, it wasn't such a much.

M'LARNIN OUTCLASSED

It also would be achieving absurdity to state at this point, or any other, that Mandell still is the lightweight champion of the world. Everybody knew before the first round was over that, if McLarnin really was the outstanding challenger, Mandell would be champion until they started giving away cigar coupons to the two-nickels-for-a-dime telephone customers.

Of course, it is always popular and safe to stand gallantly over the man who is down and kick him directly beneath the clavicle. I would like to avoid this onerous task but, after McLarnin's performance, I have no alternative but to deliver my kick with vindictive joy and go my way.

McLarnin probably couldn't have beaten Mandell with a horse whip last night, but he didn't have to lose so far off that he failed to carry a single round of the 15. James was as game as the Irish in him demanded and he never stopped trying in the face of certain defeat. This was all laudatory and commendable, but it meant nothing. My objection is entered to the manner in which he tried.

Virtually 10 rounds behind at the end of the tenth—I called the fifth and sixth even—McLarnin was so poorly advised as to keep winging away to the body, his apparent intention being to wear his man down. This would have been ideal tactics if they were fighting 50 rounds, instead of 15. As it was, McLarnin's only chance then was to fling right and left hands at the profile and never stop. Of course, it is none of my business that he never started, but I nevertheless reserve the right not to like the performance.

TACTICS ALL WRONG

It might be pointed out that McLarnin couldn't reach Mandell's head and I will agree with this contention to the extent of saying that

TOO MANY LEFTIES

The Giants are overburdened with left-hand batting outfielders this season, having the above trio and Jimmy Welsh, obtained from the Braves in the Rogers Hornsby trade. They also had George Harper, another fellow who hit from the wrong side of the plate, but sent him to the Cardinals in the swap for Catcher Bob O'Farrell.

AND A WHOLE CREW OF STARBOARD SWINGERS

What is one fellow's joy is another's sorrow. Here are the three star catchers of the Brooklyn Robins, all right-hand hitters. The Pirates' two star catchers, Earl Smith and Johnny Gooch, are left-hand hitters, but young Ralston Hemsley, who is just breaking in, bats from the right side of the platter.

CORSAIRS, REDLEGS SPLIT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

CINCINNATI, May 22.—Once again the "Flying Pole" from the hard-coal fields has speeded up the attack of the Pirates. The best the Bushwhackers could do yesterday was a fifty-fifty party in a double tangle with the ambitious Reds, but Adam Comorosky set a pace fast enough to win both ends of the twin bill had his mates been able to stay with him. The Reds won the decision in the opener, 4-3, the Pirates getting a 6-3 verdict in the nightcap.

With Ray Kremer ready the Buccos will challenge the Reds this afternoon in the fourth game of the series. Carl Mays is likely to go to the slab against the Pittsburghers.

Sharing the limelight of yesterday with Comorosky were Eddie Mulligan and Fred Fussell. The San Francisco ace was thrown into the second-base breach as a result of Sparky Adams' illness. Although Mulligan never played the keystone sack he acted quite familiar with the position. He made one error on a slow bounder, but his general play smacked of a star.

FUSSELL GETS WIN

Fussell turned in his first Pirate victory in a terrific slab duel with Jake May. The Pirates had to come from behind to win the triumph, but they did this in an impressive manner. In the ninth frame, Grantham, Comorosky and Smith unleashed a drive that made the victory safe.

Boots Grantham was a big headliner in the victorious contest. Boots reeled off three hits in succession and the whole three were timely. In the fifth he helped to bring about a deadlock after opening with a single. Sprout Waner drove him over with two out.

Grantham cracked out a pretty hit in the sixth with two out to score Wright with a run that brought another knot. Comorosky followed Grantham's single with a

LANGLEY COPS GROUP TITLE

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

Langley High School clinched the championship of Section 2 of the City Senior League when it defeated Allegheny Vocational at Phipps field yesterday, the margin being 9 to 2. Langley remains undefeated, with only one game remaining on its regular schedule.

The W. P. I. A. L. championship series got under way yesterday and Dormont High School, winner of the bunting in Section 5, easily set down Monaca High School, Section 6 victor, with a 4-1 defeat. Pitcairn and Turtle Creek Union go on the mound today in another title series contest. They finished their race in Section 2 in a dead heat and the winner meets Dormont in the second round.

THEY PLAYED—AND HOW!

Among others present for the Realtors' tourney were Harry H. Hunter, president of the Stanton Heights Golf Club and former president of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, shown on the left; Wright McClure, former West Penn titlist, who led the medal scoring field yesterday with a superb 69, and, in the inset, James C. Wilson, president of the Real Estate Board of Pittsburgh who was in direct charge of the event.

McClure Shoots 69 In Realtor's Play

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER

WRIGHT M'CLURE of the Chartiers Heights Country Club, and John (Jock) Graham, vice president of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, were playing "hot" golf yesterday in the first tournament of the year for the Real Estate Board of Pittsburgh at the Highland Country Club.

The former Junior Champion, McClure, came through to get a stroke score of 69—one of the best of the year thus far for Highland—while the veteran Graham was only one stroke behind him. Between the two of them, being partners, they beat Fred Weppner of Stanton Heights and George A. Ormiston of Oakmont, secretary of the W. P. G. A., to a stand-still—they had a best ball of 63, which is close to being unbeatable.

Out .... 345 343 354—33
In .... 444 343 424—36—69

Graham's card was none the less interesting:

Out .... 434 354 545—38
In .... 433 432 433—34—70

And, here's the bird of them all—their best ball:

Out .... 334 343 454—33
In .... 433 343 433—30—63

Whitey Michelson and all the other stars and a real threat to win the Olympic marathon event.

Let 'em keep on calling him Chesty Joe. He has something to be chesty about and so long as he keeps on winning and making good his boasts he can pop off all he wants to and we'll like it. It's the chesty guy who can't deliver who is a pain in the region of the Adam's apple.

HERE'S what Jimmy Dime, New Castle's veteran manager of boxers, thinks of the current fistic situation, according to an interview he granted a few days ago to a New Castle scribe:

Tunney is a quick thinker, but doesn't compare with Jim Jeffries, Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Corbett as an all-round champion.

Dempsey in his prime was a good fighter and ranked with the best of them of all time.

Mickey Walker as middleweight champion doesn't compare with Stanley Ketchel and Billy Papke. Les Darcy was one of the best fighters in this class.

The featherweights of today do not compare with the old ones. "What would a Terry McGovern or even a Johnny Kilbane do with the present crop of contenders?" he asked.

nobody can reach another man's head without trying.

However, the fact of the matter was that McLarnin apparently did not know enough to beat Mandell the worst night the latter knew. And last night was one of his best. He slipped inside the right punch that leveled Terris and absorbed it innocuously with shoulder and elbow. He whipped his left hand into Jimmy's face without surcease, absolutely the worst thing to be without. And, and when he felt the urge, he crossed a right that had James' knees in a drooling condition in more than one of the late rounds.

That was the fight, as it happened to be fought. McLarnin tried, but he never found the combination, which is not to his discredit. He tried to open it with the wrong key, which is.

He carried from the ring, in addition to the harp, the mouse and the vin rouge, one distinct attribute. He "made" the fight with his rushing and leading. But, as to that, his rushing got him nothing but a punch on the nose and his leading got him only the exercise.

I am becoming a bit weary of these lads who "make" fights. Tunney doesn't make them, either. He wins them.

beautiful three-bagger to right center that tallied Boots.

The fleet first-sacker opened the ninth with a double and Commy promptly drove him over with a single. Up came Earl Smith with a two-sacker to right and the "Flying Pole" carried home the mail like Honus Wagner in his palmy days.

The Reds jumped off in this game with a two-run lead, Ethan Allen driving in two tallies with a three-bagger after two were out. Wright opened the second with a three-sacker and Glenn rode home on Capt. Traynor's out. The Buccos succeeded in shelling May off the mound in the big ninth, Pete Donohue taking up the work.

SOLDIERS DROPPED AS CAGE FOES

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 22.—(AP.)—Echoes of the Army-Navy athletic controversy, concerning the three-year eligibility rule affecting varsity team competition, reverberated in sport circles again today with the announcement by Naval Academy authorities that Harvard had been substituted for West Point on next year's basketball schedule.

Adhering to the principle established last fall by which Navy had warned that it would not enter competition in intercollegiate circles with teams allowing its players to compete on varsity teams for more than three years, Lieutenant Commander O. O. Kessing, graduate manager of athletics at the Naval Academy, said today that Harvard would meet Navy on February 23, 1929, thus eliminating the cadets from their customary clash with the midshipmen in basketball.

The appearance of Harvard on the middy schedule brings the second of the "big three" teams into Naval Academy major athletics.

Railway Leaders, Dormant For Years, Show New Life

—By B. C. FORBES—

AMERICA used to have railway giants, railway masters. They passed, leaving a race of railway servants who exercised little vision, daring, pioneering.

Are we entering a new era of mastery, napoleonic railroading?

Developments suggest that we may be.

SOME of the greatest stalwarts America has produced made their name and fame in railroading. Commodore Vanderbilt was a veritable Trojan; what he achieved in shipping, though notable, did not compare with what he later achieved in railroading. We have had John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and Henry Ford in industry and the original J. P. Morgan in finance. But comparable with their activities were the the activities of Edward H. Harriman, James J. Hill and Collis P. Huntington.

Harriman had perhaps the boldest vision of any man of affairs America has ever produced. To this vision he wedded unmatched force, ability, driving power. He was sincere, not cynical, when he replied to a government prober's question as to how far he would like to go in corraling railroads, "I would bring them all together if you would let me."

That generation passed.

REGULATION became so rigid, public opinion so hostile, the need for new railway building so negligible that their successors became mere operators of the properties handed over to them for management. The spirit of initative had been chilled, if not killed. Heroic, spectacular achievements ceased. Railway executives became the obedient servants of their boards of directors. Railroading lost much of its glamor. It was no longer rapidly creating vast fortunes. Railway men advised their sons to seek other callings possessing greater potentialities.

COLORLESS years followed. Railroading appeared to have settled into a rut. The routine operating of trains was conducted efficiently. Indeed, very creditable progress was made in the handling of traffic and trains.

But with the exception of the Van Sweringen brothers, no picturesque characters arose in the railway world. No napoleonic strokes were attempted.

BY and by new developments invaded the field of transportation. First, the automobile came along as a competitor for short-haul passenger traffic. Then the motor truck loomed up as an important factor in transporting freight for short distances. Next, the passenger bus made its appearance almost overnight as a serious rival.

What were railway men doing during this evolution to meet the new conditions and capitalize them to their own advantage?

For too long they did practically nothing but whine and complain about the "inroads" upon their business and protest against the "unfair" competition.

THEN a few of the most alert and forward-looking railway managers decided to act rather than cry. They addressed themselves to studying and solving the problem of how to jump in and take advantage of these newer forms of transportation. Most recently numbers of leading railroads—as well as old-established traction companies—have either annexed bus and truck lines or established facilities of their own.

The indications now are that railway men as a whole realize that their function is transportation, not merely and solely railroading.

MOST encouraging is the new plan to combine airship with long distance railway traveling. The cooperation of such roads as the Pennsylvania and the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe with well managed airship companies demonstrates emphatically that our more progressive railway men realize that their job is transportation by whatever means prove most efficient. Carrying passengers by rail during the night and by airship during the day, thus spanning the entire continent in two days, marks the greatest and most encouraging forward step the railroads have taken in many a day.

The most recent efforts to effect large-scale consolidations also reflect the aggressive and progressive spirit which once again is animating our railway leaders.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22.—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 2 points, but almost immediately eased, active months selling about 7 to 10 points net lower under a renewal of realizing or liquidation.

These offerings were absorbed at the decline to about 20.72c for July contracts, and the market rallied 8 or 10 points from the lowest by the end of the first hour, on buying by Liverpool and covering. Demand evidently was promoted by reports of showers in the South with complaints of unseasonably low temperatures in parts of Texas.

Private cables said Liverpool had been influenced by calling and local or continental buying on reports of rains in the South.

Prices rallied during the forenoon with July selling up to 20.90c. Active months showed net advances of 6 to 9 points on further Liverpool buying and covering inspired by reports there would be no labor crisis in Lancashire as the ballot on the proposal to reduce wages had failed to carry. Offerings increased on a more favorable western belt forecast and prices eased off, but the selling was not active and the outlook for cool weather with showers in some parts of the eastern belt helped to steady prices later. At midday the market was quiet and within 2 or 3 points of yesterday's closing quotations.

HEAVY SELLING SKIDS STOCKS FURTHER

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP.)—The stock market underwent another sharp reaction today on selling inspired by the recent restriction of credit facilities. Withdrawal of pool support for some of the high priced industrials and specialties was followed by drastic declines of 5 to nearly 20 points, while a long list of seasoned dividend paying rails and industrials sagged 1 to 4 points under the weight of heavy liquidation for both accounts.

Retention of the 6 per cent rate for call money, accompanied by the calling of about $10,000,000 in loans and a stiffening of prime commercial paper rates, had a decidedly dampening effect on bullish enthusiasm. The violent decline in the New York Traction issues, based on the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court granting the city a stay until October 2 in the 7-cent fare case, also caused general unsettlement.

There was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement. Such earnings reports as came to hand were mixed in character and threw little light on the current trend of business. Stiffening of margin requirements by some of the large commission houses tended to stimulate the liquidation of weakened marginal holdings.

Airplane stocks again bore the brunt of the selling pressure, Wright broke 19¼ points to 167 and Curtiss fell 9 to 119. Dupont, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Interboro Rapid Transit, American Bank Note, General Motors, Coca Cola, Radio, American International Corporation and Victor Talking Machine sold down 5 to nearly 15 points.

Rails yielded with the industrials, although the declines were not as large. Delaware and Hudson, "Nickle Plate" common, Texas and Pacific and Wabash sold 2 to 5¼ points below yesterday's final quotations.

Trading showed a marked expansion in volume, with the ticker 30 minutes behind the market by early afternoon.

The closing was heavy. The late improvement in prices was the most pronounced among the shares that had been under greatest pressure. Curtiss and Wright came up 9 points each from their low levels, and Radio, 7, before the rally ran its course. Recoveries in other prominent stocks reached 2 to 4 points before signs of weakness occurred again. Total sales approximated 3,000,000 shares.

Fruit Packing Outlook Improved.

Volume of sales of spot fruits and vegetables and future vegetables is largely in excess of that for last year, according to R. I. Bentley, president of California Packing Company. Carry-over pack has been largely disposed of and in certain lines of vegetables, sales have reduced current supply. When work on the new pack is started it is expected that the turnover will have been largely eliminated. It is generally understood that Haiku Packing and other companies handling pineapples will raise prices today to meet the increase made by Hawaiian Pineapple Company. The price will apply to the pack of new specifications as of May 1, 1928.

Valley Mills at 70-75 Per Cent.

Operations in the Youngstown steel district have declined to between 70 and 75 per cent of capacity, although demand for sheets continues large. Of the 53 independent openhearths, 35 are active, with Bessemer output not more than 50 per cent of capacity. Of the 127 independent sheet mills, 107 are active, compared with 95 last week. Independent bar mill operations are not above 50 per cent. Tube mill production is at 60 per cent, as against 75 per cent a week ago.

Texon to Recapitalize.

A private wire to H. B. Edwards & Co. today said the Texon Oil and Land Company's stockholders will be notified shortly of a change in the capital structure of the company on a basis of one share of new no-par value stock for each five shares of the old stock now outstanding. It is the intention of the company to establish a dividend rate of $2 a year on the new stock. Prior to the suspension of dividends on the old stock several months ago, the rate of payment was 20 cents per share quarterly.

Watching the Volume.

Wall Street opinion agrees that it will be interesting to watch the data on transactions to discover how much of the speculative desire will evaporate and disappear as a result of the earlier closing of the New York Stock Exchange. The literal minded, if they happen to be of the opinion that speculation is bad for the soul, may be tempted to suggest that the reform be carried further, and that the exchange be closed 15 minutes after opening. The financial public will have to change its habits to conform to the new arrangement, which will be to some extent a handicap on banks who want liquidity—or instant marketability—for the collateral behind their loans. The earlier closing, though perhaps necessary as an emergency device, will impose some degree of hardship on investors who want to make actual sales—especially if they reside in the far west, where the clock lags three hours behind. Yesterday's sales fell below 3,000,000, a step in the desired direction, but it remains to be seen if the more moderate pace is continued.

Facilities Overtaxed.

It is difficult for brokerage offices to expand rapidly—even in the clerical departments, because of the specialized character of the work. The present financial traffic jam emphasizes the need of making a mechanical revolution in brokerage offices, substituting tabulating machines for the slower hand movements of bookkeeping. Already the trend in that direction has been quickened, but the expansion cannot be made rapidly enough to keep up with an impetuous public. In taking this emergency step, the governors of the exchange felt that fewer cars—to revert to the traffic metaphor—could pass through the neck of the bottle in four hours than in five. Thus—to change the figure—the stock exchange, overwhelmed with public demand, hangs out the standing room only sign, and turns away commissions—an unprecedented procedure for brokers. Such outside demand as is legitimate will no doubt try to express itself in four hours instead of five. However, the exchange should cut down volume in reducing the operations in time by one-fifth of floor traders and tape operators on the outside.

Southern Stores Expanding.

The Southern Stores Corporation is reported to have obtained an option to buy the 17 Handy Andy Chain Stores of Miami, Fla., and the 51 stores in the Atlanta, Ga., unit of Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., with negotiations under way for the acquisition of a third chain store system. Southern Stores has contracted to manage the Miami chain on a management fee basis. The Atlanta chain option expires March 16, 1929, and provides that payment may be made in five-year 6 per cent purchase money notes of Southern Stores Corporation.

Adjustment in Process.

Those who have been optimistic for some time contend that the market is merely readjusting itself to new conditions, and express the view that a new advance will be started as soon as the present period of irregularity is ended. Predictions are heard that a change for the better will come into the general list within 10 days to two weeks, by which time it is expected that technical condition will be materially improved again. There has been a steady increase in the short interest in the past few days. Traders who have been bearish gained confidence by the action of the market last Wednesday and have been putting out new short lines during all subsequent recoveries. This selling has been one of the chief influences in forcing stocks to lower levels in recent sessions.

Texas Corporation.

Texas Corporation slipped back in the early trading today after running up to a new high for all time on the bulge yesterday. The company has an enviable dividend record. It has paid $3 a year since present $25 par stock was issued in 1920; prior to that it paid $10 a year for some years on the old $100 par stock and has paid cash dividends each year since 1903 with occasional stock dividends and valuable subscription rights. In a stock market where the average dividend yield is well under 5 per cent, it is not surprising that Texas Corporation's record, plus improved position of integrated oil companies, begets recognition. Much of the recent buying has been credited to the Fisher interests. Though there have been reports that these interests had purchased the Texaco holdings of the late John J. Mitchell, they lack confirmation, thus far. There are numerous instances recently where entry of Fishers as stockholders has been followed by representation on the directorate of various companies.

Extension of the lease and option on the plant for a period of two years has made the improvement feasible.

Good Weather Helps Glass.

Some branches of the flat glass industry are fairly active while recession in the volume of business in others is noticeable, according to the National Glass Budget. Good weather lately has been an incentive to building and as a result materials are moving out of retail yards at an increased rate. Window glass manufacturers report good demand. From the amount of business booked prior to May 11, it would seem that jobbers and distributors tried to cover present quarter requirements before the advance in price went into effect. Keen competition among the distributors continues in evidence in a number of the larger cities. It appears that those in the East are leading in this particular activity. Plate glass manufacturers say that demand is beginning to fall off slightly.

Just previous to close on Monday a small amount of money was loaned at 5½ per cent, but this was no reflection of the actual market.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, May 22.—Dry, hot weather Northwest, unfavorable for spring wheat growth, tended to make wheat prices average higher today in the early dealings. There were also reports of adverse crop conditions in Europe. Opening at ⅛c decline to ⅛c advance, wheat later showed gains all around. Corn, oats and provisions were easy, with corn starting unchanged to ⅛c off and subsequently undergoing a general sag.

Complaints of unseasonable heat and dryness in the spring wheat belt today applied especially to the Canadian Northwest, but were also received from sections south of the international line. A sample dispatch dated Pierpont, S. D., said the greater part of surrounding territory was very dry, with small grain thin, patchy and making no progress, and giving promise of only a meager yield unless general rains come soon.

Spotted conditions for domestic spring wheat were further emphasized by messages from Brookings, Watertown and Redfield, S. D. These advices described roads and fields as very dusty, with surface moisture practically exhausted. Meanwhile predictions pointed to continued excessive heat and absence of moisture for Canada, Alberta in particular.

Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

LOCAL STOCKS NARROW IN QUIET TRADING SESSION

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP.)—Heavy liquidation, encouraged by maintenance of high money rates, generally unsettled conditions and the downward movement on the "big board," sent prices lower throughout the list on the curb market today. Here and there a few industrials, specialties or utilities, feeling the influence of some local or individual development, resisted selling, but the general trend was to lower levels.

Aero Supply "A" dropped more than 14 points, and the "B" issue about 6. Transcontinental Air Transport and American Telephone and Telegraph joined the decline, Transcontinental sagging about 4 points. Wright Aero rights moved up a point against the trend.

Losses were numerous throughout the industrial group, with Bancitaly, Columbia Graphophone, Evans Auto Loading B, Fox Theater A, Northwest Engineering and Servel selling off 2 or more points each.

Utilities were thrown on the market in volume, forcing prices down as much as 5 points. Jersey City Power and Light preferred and Nevada California Electric, however, advanced to new high ground.

Oils and pipe lines slumped with the rest of the list.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, May 22.—(AP.)—Prices drifted lower in the bond market today under the influence of slowly rising time money rates and the weakness of New York traction issues. A few industrials made small gains, but rails were inactive and inclined to be heavy in sympathy with the general list.

Fairly heavy liquidation, evidently based on the court decision postponing until October at least any action on a fare increase, sent the New York tractions down 1 to nearly 4 points. New York Railways 6s headed the decline with a loss of 3⅝ points, closely followed by Third Avenue 5s and Interborough Rapid Transit Refunding 5s.

Some industrials also were heavy, Keith Corporation first 6s sagging to 95¼, a new year's low. Copper company obligations showed little change.

The foreign list was steady, but trading was light.

United States government obligations continued to decline, Liberty fourth 4¼s reaching a new minimum for the year.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The raw sugar market was unchanged with no sales reported. Cuban was offered at 4.52, but some nearby duty frees were available at fractionally less, with buyers inclined to hold off.

Raw sugar futures opened unchanged to 1 point lower under liquidation and commission-house selling, but attracted increased covering and trade buying. Rallies followed with prices at midday 1 to 2 points net higher. The continued inactivity in the spot market seemed to restrict aggressiveness. While the undertone was steady there was a noticeable disposition among operators to await developments.

No changes occurred in refined prices, which are quoted at 5.95 to 6.00c for fine granulated. The demand was fair, but limited to nearby requirements.

WEST VIRGINIA DOCTORS URGE DEFECTIVES' HOME

FAIRMONT, W. Va., May 22.—(AP.)—The council of the West Virginia Medical Association, meeting preliminary to the convening of the general convention, has adopted resolutions urging the 1929 Legislature to pass an appropriation for a State institution for mentally defective children and create a fund for enforcement of the medical practice act. A golf tournament will be one of the features of the meeting, which ends Thursday.

BLACKFORD — On Tuesday morning, May 22, 1928, at 10:30 o'clock, ISABELLE BLACKFORD, daughter of the late John H. and Isabelle Greer Blackford. Services at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Harry Danner, 1018 Mellon street, East End. Time announced later.

PRODUCE MARKET

The movement of fruit and vegetables at the local wholesale produce district was fairly good today. The quotations on vegetables and fruit were about unchanged.

Poultry supplies were liberal and the demand was rather dull. The market was easy and the quotations were unchanged.

The butter and cheese markets were firm. Eggs were steady. No change was made in the quotations on these markets.

Car lot supplies were heavy, a total of 754 cars being on track. Arrivals included 7 cars of apples, 19 cabbage, 2 carrots, 3 cantaloupes, 1 cauliflower, 3 cucumbers, 2 lemons, 19 lettuce, 12 onions, 17 oranges, 1 peppers, 1 spinach, 45 potatoes, 15 strawberries, 4 sweet potatoes, 17 tomatoes and 3 peas.

LONE STAR SAGS DIXIE FIRM

Slightly downward tendencies were in evidence on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in the early dealings today, the reactionary tone being attributed to the price movement in New York, where the sharp breaks in the specialties carried other stocks to lower levels.

Lone Star Gas was offered down moderately in the forenoon, but the stock gave ground grudgingly as a few hundred shares were liquidated under the influence of the weakness in New York. In yesterday's session Lone Star showed some signs of wanting to get into higher ground, but the movement was smothered when buyers withdrew their bids to await developments in the general market.

Dixie Gas common went against the main trend and sold up on news that the amalgamation of southern gas properties in which it will be included is being worked out and that a subsidiary had completed a big well in Louisiana. Terms of exchange of the various companies into the holding concern are expected shortly, and it is figured that Dixie will go in at an attractive figure as compared with its recent selling levels in the open market.

Harbison Walker reached new high ground on a small lot sale at 210, comparing with the last previous price of 208. Standard Sanitary was down slightly, but was very quiet.

Bank stocks were actively bid for, but shares were scarce. Colonial Trust, which hit a new high of 310 yesterday, was offered around that figure.

WORLD WIDE BANKING CONNECTIONS

EXTENSIVE banking connections all over the world enable the Foreign Bureau of the Mellon National Bank to handle efficiently any type of financial transaction necessitated by business abroad. Since we have correspondent banks in practically every country, we can readily arrange for the transfer of money, the collection of foreign drafts, or other transactions involving foreign exchange by mail or cable.

Many individuals and organizations prefer to do all their foreign banking through the Mellon National Bank because of our long and close association with important financial houses throughout the world, and because our wealth of experience in handling foreign transactions assures competent service.

SHE SUES AGAIN

MRS. WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT

For the second time, Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, the former Emily O'Neil Davies, has brought divorce action against her husband, charging neglect to provide. She leaves the matter of custody of their child, 3, to the Newport (R. I.) Superior Court. Last July Mrs. Vanderbilt's divorce action in the Tribunal of the Seine, Paris, was withdrawn after intercession of her mother-in-law, Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt.

TOWN HALL IS PROPOSED AS BOND ITEM

Allegheny county's need of a town hall and the advisability of asking the citizens to vote upon the question in the forthcoming peoples' bond issue were urged upon the County Commissioners today by George S. Davison, chairman of the town hall committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, and other members of the committee. The hearing was brief and the committee avoided any discussion of specific plans or probable sites. The amount asked for the project is $6,000,000.

"We are presenting the matter to you Commissioners in the same light that we propose it to the people," said Mr. Davison. "This is distinctly a business proposition. We believe that Pittsburgh should be as kind to itself as Cleveland has been, and Cleveland has one of the finest auditoriums in the country. It cost $6,000,000. The project should be looked upon as an asset, furnishing the people both education and amusement. The armory plan was presented as far back as 1919, and was dismissed as impractical. You are only fooling yourself if you think it would cost only $1,000,000 to carry out the armory project. It would cost nearer $4,000,000."

Other speakers urged the Commissioners to include the town hall proposal in the bond issue. Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong and Commissioner E. V. Babcock expressed themselves as favorably impressed by the committee's plan. Members of the committee attending the hearing were: Marcus Aaron, L. H. Burnett, Oliver J. Keller, C. W. Danziger, J. F. Keenan, W. M. Jacoby.

ESTATE GAINS $17,000 SINCE WILL MAKING

Fred Muehlethaler, of Munhall, was worth about $3,000 when he made his will 29 years ago. When he died in Florida recently he was worth $20,000. Since the will was made two brothers, beneficiaries, have died and another has disappeared. Two sisters are mentioned in the will.

Suicide, Theory

GEORGE CAROTHERS

A retired policeman who had spent about half of his life on the force, George Carothers, 63, 1932 Metropolitan street, ended his life in his home last night, according to a coroner's report. There was a bullet wound in his mouth and a revolver at his side.

STATE G.O.P. MAY BACK VOTE MACHINES

The Republican organization of Pennsylvania, headed by State Chairman Edward Martin, may support both the Pittsburgh metropolitan district plan and the voting machine amendment at the election in November.

While the leaders of the party are maintaining silence on both propositions, it was learned today that they are seriously considering throwing their support to both.

A resolution indorsing the metropolitan district plan will be introduced at the meeting of the Republican city and county committee in North Side Carnegie Hall Saturday afternoon. It will have the support of W. L. Mellon, who still is looked upon as the leader of the party here in spite of his retirement from the state chairmanship.

At the same meeting a resolution will be introduced favoring the proposed amendment that would permit the use of voting machines in Pennsylvania. Although Mellon has maintained silence on this proposition, it is said that this, too, will have his support. If that is the case, little opposition is expected, although machines are not regarded favorably by some of the ward leaders of Pittsburgh.

Favorable action on these propositions at the meeting here possibly will be followed by orders to the organization throughout the state to support both.

LEAVES ESTATE TO FRIENDS

"Faithful friends" are bequeathed the major portion of the $50,000 estate of Anna F. Mark, of McKeesport. Distant relatives are willed small amounts. After giving $500 to Calvary Lutheran Church of Wilkinsburg, she left $10,000 and her personal property to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Keil. Dr. W. H. Chambers is left $1,000 and bank stock worth $2,600. Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Woodhouse and eight other friends and relatives are bequeathed $1,000 each and 16 others receive from $150 to $500.

BODY IN RIVER SHOWS WOUND

Police were confronted by a mystery today when the body of an unidentified man, recovered from the Allegheny River under the Manchester Bridge, showed a wound, possibly from a bullet, in the side of the head.

The body, that of a man about 50, had been in the water for several weeks, morgue officials estimated. He wore two sweaters, and four pennies were found in his clothing.

NO. 271.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing and directing an increase in the indebtedness of the City of Pittsburgh in the sum of Seventy-Four Thousand Dollars ($74,000.00) and providing for the issue and sale of bonds of said City in said amount, to provide funds to pay all costs and expenses, including services, of making surveys, investigations, estimates and plans for the improvement for public uses and purposes of the river fronts of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio Rivers within the City of Pittsburgh, for providing adequate and improved facilities and terminals for all forms of river traffic and for such changes and improvements in the street, sewerage and drainage systems of the City, and of properties affected thereby, as may be necessary to carry out the foregoing improvements, and for such other changes, improvements and measures as may be deemed necessary therefor or desirable in connection therewith, and providing for the redemption of said bonds and the payment of interest thereon.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That the indebtedness of the City of Pittsburgh be increased in the sum of Seventy-Four Thousand Dollars ($74,000.00), to provide funds to pay all costs and expenses, including services, of making surveys, investigations, estimates and plans for the improvement for public uses and purposes of the river fronts of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio Rivers within the City of Pittsburgh, for providing adequate and improved facilities and terminals for all forms of river traffic and for such changes and improvements in the street, sewerage and drainage systems of the City, and of properties affected thereby, as may be necessary to carry out the foregoing improvements, and for such other changes, improvements and measures as may be deemed necessary therefor or desirable in connection therewith.

Section 2. That bonds of the City of Pittsburgh in the aggregate principal amount of Seventy-four Thousand ($74,000.00) Dollars be issued for the purposes aforesaid. Said bonds shall be in denominations of One Hundred ($100.00) Dollars or multiples thereof; shall be dated as of the first day of May, 1928, and shall be payable in Twenty equal annual installments of Three Thousand Seven Hundred Dollars ($3,700.00) each, one of which shall mature on the first day of May in each of the years 1929 to 1948 inclusive. Said bonds shall bear interest at the rate of Four and One-quarter per centum (4¼%) per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of May and November in each year, without deduction for any taxes which may be levied thereon by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania pursuant to any present or future law, the payment of which is hereby assumed by the City of Pittsburgh. The principal and interest of said bonds shall be payable in lawful money of the United States of America at the office of the City Treasurer of said City. Said bonds shall be coupon bonds, exchangeable at the option of the holder for a registered bond or bonds of the same maturity and of the denomination of One Hundred ($100.00) Dollars or a multiple thereof, not exceeding the aggregate principal amount of the coupon bond or bonds surrendered in exchange therefor, by surrendering such coupon bond or bonds, with all coupons not then due, at the office of the City Controller, and the City Controller is hereby authorized and directed to cause such coupon and registered bonds to be engraved and to issue the same in the name of the City of Pittsburgh, the expense thereof to be charged to Appropriation No. 32 (Contingent Fund.) Registered bonds shall be registered with the City Treasurer, and shall be transferable only on the books of the said City Treasurer. Said bonds shall be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the City Controller and sealed with the corporate seal of the City of Pittsburgh, and the coupons attached thereto shall be authenticated with a facsimile signature of the City Controller. In case of the absence or disability of any of such officials, the bonds shall be signed by the city official authorized by law or by resolution of Council to act in his place. Each of said bonds shall be known and designated as RIVER IMPROVEMENT BOND, 1928.

Section 3. That said bonds shall be sold by the Mayor and the City Controller at not less than par and accrued interest, after giving such notice of sale as may be required by law.

Section 4. That until said bonds, issued as herein provided, shall be fully paid, there is hereby levied and assessed annually upon all subjects now by law liable, or hereafter to be made liable, to assessment for taxation for City purposes, an annual tax, commencing the first year after said debt shall have been increased or incurred, namely the year 1929, sufficient to pay the interest on said bonds as the same shall accrue and become payable, and any tax on said interest which by the terms of said bonds is assumed by the City, and also an annual tax commencing in said year equal to Five Per Centum (5%) of the total amount of said bonds hereby authorized, to be set apart as a sinking fund for the payment of the principal and redemption of said bonds as they become due and payable according to their terms, and the same is hereby appropriated out of the revenue of said City for the payment and redemption aforesaid. There is also hereby appropriated out of the general revenue of said City an amount sufficient to meet the installment of interest due on said bonds during the current fiscal year.

Section 5. That all bonds issued by the authority of this ordinance and the Acts of Assembly authorizing the same shall be and become part of the funded debt of the City of Pittsburgh, and shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities thereof, and shall be free from taxation, as aforesaid, and for the payment of the principal of said bonds and the interest thereon semi-annually as the same shall become due and payable, the faith, honor, credit and property of said City are hereby pledged.

Section 6. That the form of coupon bonds issued in pursuance of this Ordinance shall be substantially as follows:

NO. 272.

AN ORDINANCE—Granting unto the Pittsburgh Railways Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, the right to enter upon and use certain streets and highways in the City of Pittsburgh for the purpose of constructing connecting curves at the corner of Sixteenth Street and Penn Avenue and at the corner of Sixteenth Street and Liberty Avenue, subject to the terms and conditions herein provided.

Whereas—Under the right granted in the Second Paragraph of Section 2 of the City of Pittsburgh Ordinance No. 62, Series 1925, entitled "An Ordinance granting unto the Pittsburgh Railways Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, the right to enter upon, use and occupy certain streets and highways in the City of Pittsburgh, subject to the terms and conditions herein provided," the Pittsburgh Railways Company, with the approval of the Department of Public Works of the City of Pittsburgh, installed its tracks over the following routes;

Beginning in the northbound track on the 16th Street Bridge Approach at right angles opposite a point in the east curb line of said bridge approach 60.50 feet, as measured northwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the north curb line of Penn Avenue, thence by spiral and circular curve southeastwardly to a point of connection with the existing westbound track on Penn Avenue at right angles opposite a point in the north curb line of Penn Avenue 35.50 feet, more or less as measured eastwardly along the said curb line from its intersection point with the east curb line of the 16th Street Bridge Approach.

Beginning in the southbound track on the 16th Street Bridge Approach at right angles opposite a point in the west curb line of said bridge approach 60.75 feet, more or less as measured northwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the north curb line of Penn Avenue, thence southwestwardly by spiral and circular curve to a point of connection with the westbound track on Penn Avenue situated at right angles opposite a point in the north curb line of Penn Avenue 24.50 feet more or less as measured westwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the west curb line of the 16th Street Bridge Approach.

Beginning in the eastbound track on Liberty Avenue at right angles opposite a point in the north curb line of Liberty Avenue 41 feet, more or less as measured westwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the west curb line of 16th Street, thence by a spiral and circular curve northeastwardly to a point of connection with the northbound track on 16th Street, situated at right angles opposite a point in the east curb line on 16th Street 49.20 feet, more or less northwardly as measured along the said curb line from its intersection with the north curb line of Liberty Avenue.

Beginning in the eastbound track on Liberty Avenue at right angles opposite a point in the north curb line of Liberty Avenue 41 feet, more or less as measured eastwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the east curb line of 16th Street, thence by spiral and circular curve northwestwardly to a point of connection with the southbound track on 16th Street situated at right angles opposite a point in the west curb line of 16th Street 49.20 feet, more or less as measured northwardly along the said curb line from its intersection with the north curb line of Liberty Avenue.

Whereas—the right granted was only for the period of an emergency requiring the temporary discontinuance of street car operations over certain bridges in the City of Pittsburgh, as set forth in the above named Ordinance No. 62; and

Whereas—The Pittsburgh Railways Company desires to continue permanently the operation of its cars over the above described routes, notwithstanding the abatement of the emergency, the existence of which made necessary the enactment of Ordinance No. 62.

Section 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That the Pittsburgh Railways Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, shall have the right and they hereby authorized to enter upon, use and occupy for street railway purposes, the streets and highways in and along the four routes above indicated and fully described.

Section 2. The Pittsburgh Railways Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, shall have the right and they are hereby authorized to maintain, operate and use the tracks on the streets hereinbefore mentioned, and which they constructed under authority of City Ordinance No. 62 above mentioned, together with the necessary turnouts and connections, and to operate cars thereon and to use electricity as a motive power and to erect, maintain and use in the streets and highways hereinbefore mentioned, such posts, poles and other supports as said company may deem convenient for the support and maintenance of an overhead system for the operation of street railways, subject, however, to the provisions of the ordinance approved February 25, 1890, entitled, "A General Ordinance relating to the entry upon, over or under, or the use or occupation of any street, lane or alley or any part thereof, for any purpose, by passenger or street railway companies or by companies operating passenger or street railways, and providing reasonable regulations pertaining thereto for the public convenience and safety."

Section 3. The company shall furnish clean, sanitary and well lighted cars, properly heated and ventilated, and shall provide sufficient cars to furnish reasonable service to accommodate the traffic.

Section 4. The Pittsburgh Railways Company may assign any of the rights hereinbefore granted to such of the underlying companies operated or to be operated by it as it deems proper, subject to the consent of Council of the City of Pittsburgh, and subject also to the acceptance by said underlying companies of all the terms and provisions of this ordinance.

Section 5. The term of this grant shall be for the period of fifty (50) years from the date of acceptance hereof.

Section 6. This ordinance shall be accepted by the Pittsburgh Railways Company within sixty (60) days after its passage or approval, by a certificate of acceptance of all the conditions and provisions thereof. Tha seid certificate to be executed under the corporate seal of the company, duly attested by the President or Vice President, and the Secretary or an Assistant Secretary thereof, and filed with the Controller of the City.

Section 7. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

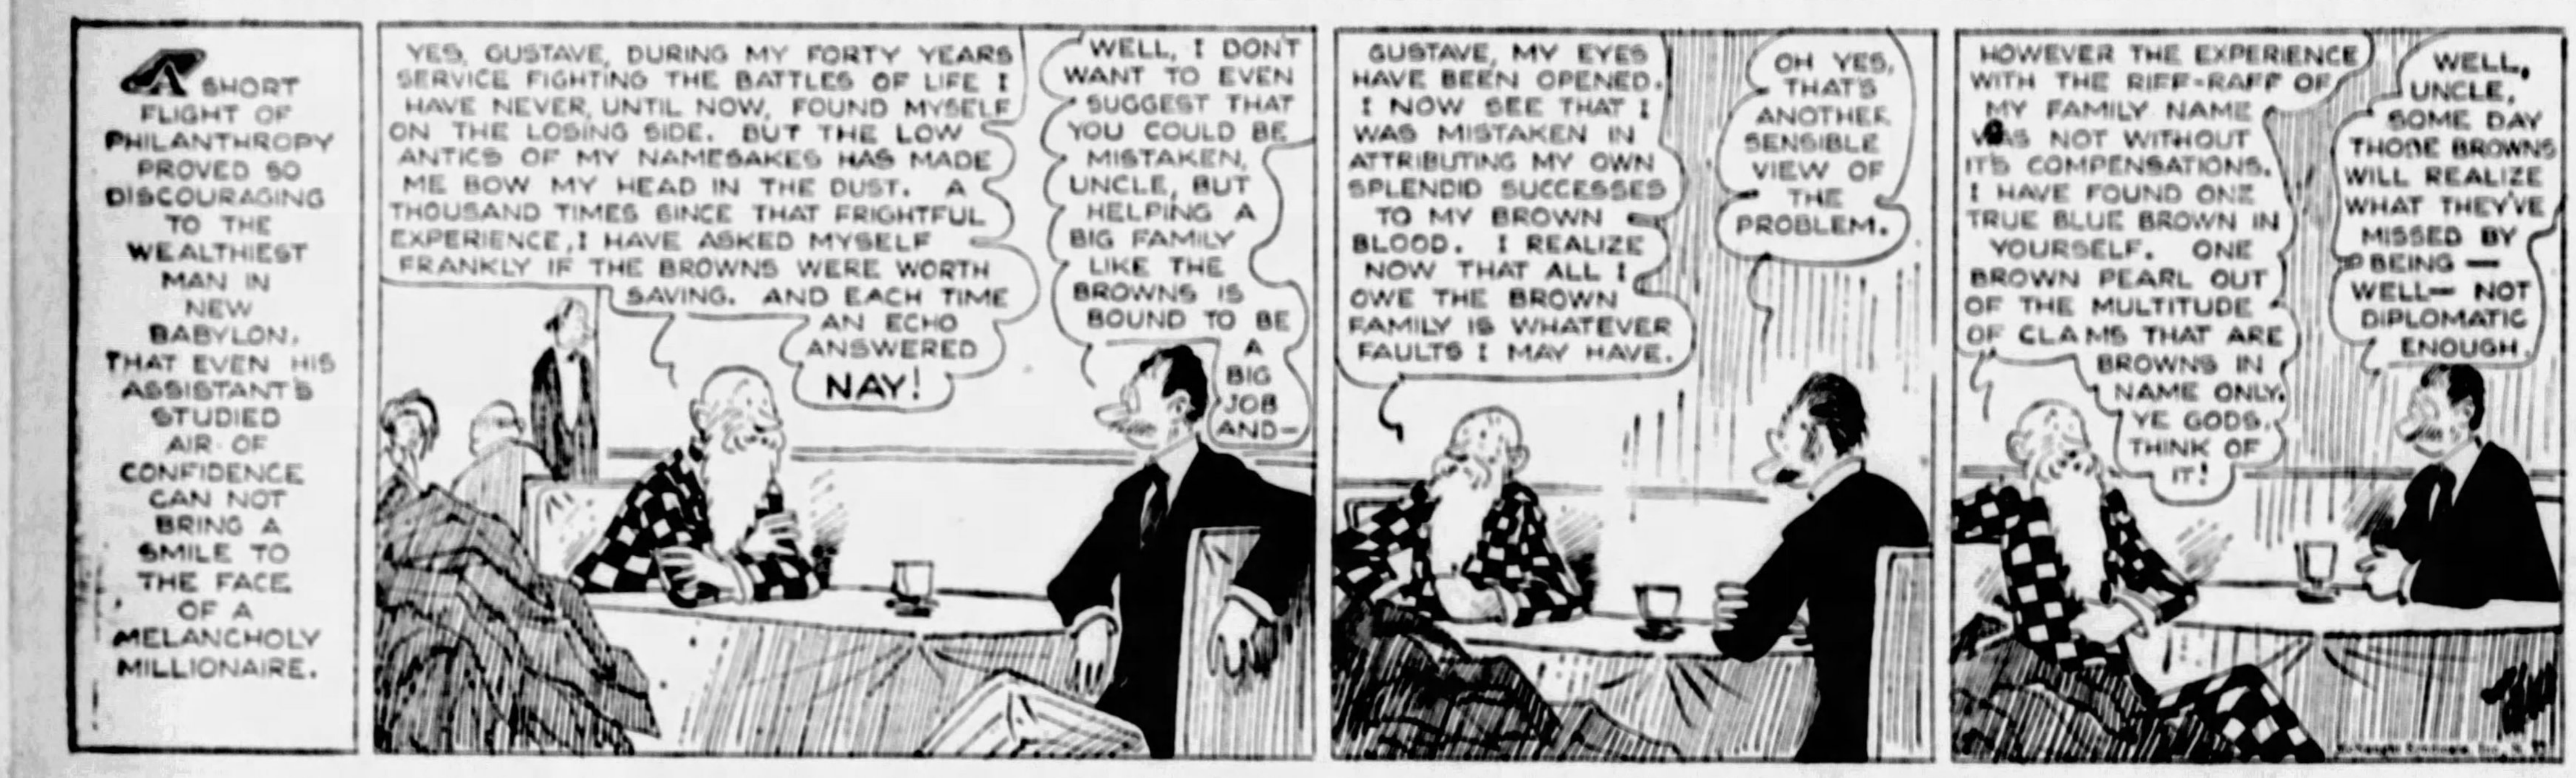
Discouraged



A SHORT FLIGHT OF PHILANTHROPY PROVED SO DISCOURAGING TO THE WEALTHIEST MAN IN NEW BABYLON, THAT EVEN HIS ASSISTANT'S STUDIED AIR OF CONFIDENCE CAN NOT BRING A SMILE TO THE FACE OF A MELANCHOLY MILLIONAIRE.
YES, GUSTAVE, DURING MY FORTY YEARS SERVICE FIGHTING THE BATTLES OF LIFE I HAVE NEVER, UNTIL NOW, FOUND MYSELF ON THE LOSING SIDE. BUT THE LOW ANTICS OF MY NAMESAKES HAS MADE ME BOW MY HEAD IN THE DUST. A THOUSAND TIMES SINCE THAT FRIGHTFUL EXPERIENCE, I HAVE ASKED MYSELF FRANKLY IF THE BROWNS WERE WORTH SAVING. AND EACH TIME AN ECHO ANSWERED NAY!
WELL, I DON'T WANT TO EVEN SUGGEST THAT YOU COULD BE MISTAKEN, UNCLE, BUT HELPING A BIG FAMILY LIKE THE BROWNS IS BOUND TO BE A BIG JOB AND—
GUSTAVE, MY EYES HAVE BEEN OPENED. I NOW SEE THAT I WAS MISTAKEN IN ATTRIBUTING MY OWN SPLENDID SUCCESSES TO MY BROWN BLOOD. I REALIZE NOW THAT ALL I OWE THE BROWN FAMILY IS WHATEVER FAULTS I MAY HAVE.
OH YES, THAT'S ANOTHER SENSIBLE VIEW OF THE PROBLEM.
HOWEVER THE EXPERIENCE WITH THE RIFF-RAFF OF MY FAMILY NAME WAS NOT WITHOUT IT'S COMPENSATIONS. I HAVE FOUND ONE TRUE BLUE BROWN IN YOURSELF. ONE BROWN PEARL OUT OF THE MULTITUDE OF CLAMS THAT ARE BROWNS IN NAME ONLY. YE GODS, THINK OF IT!
WELL, UNCLE, SOME DAY THOSE BROWNS WILL REALIZE WHAT THEY'VE MISSED BY BEING — WELL— NOT DIPLOMATIC ENOUGH.

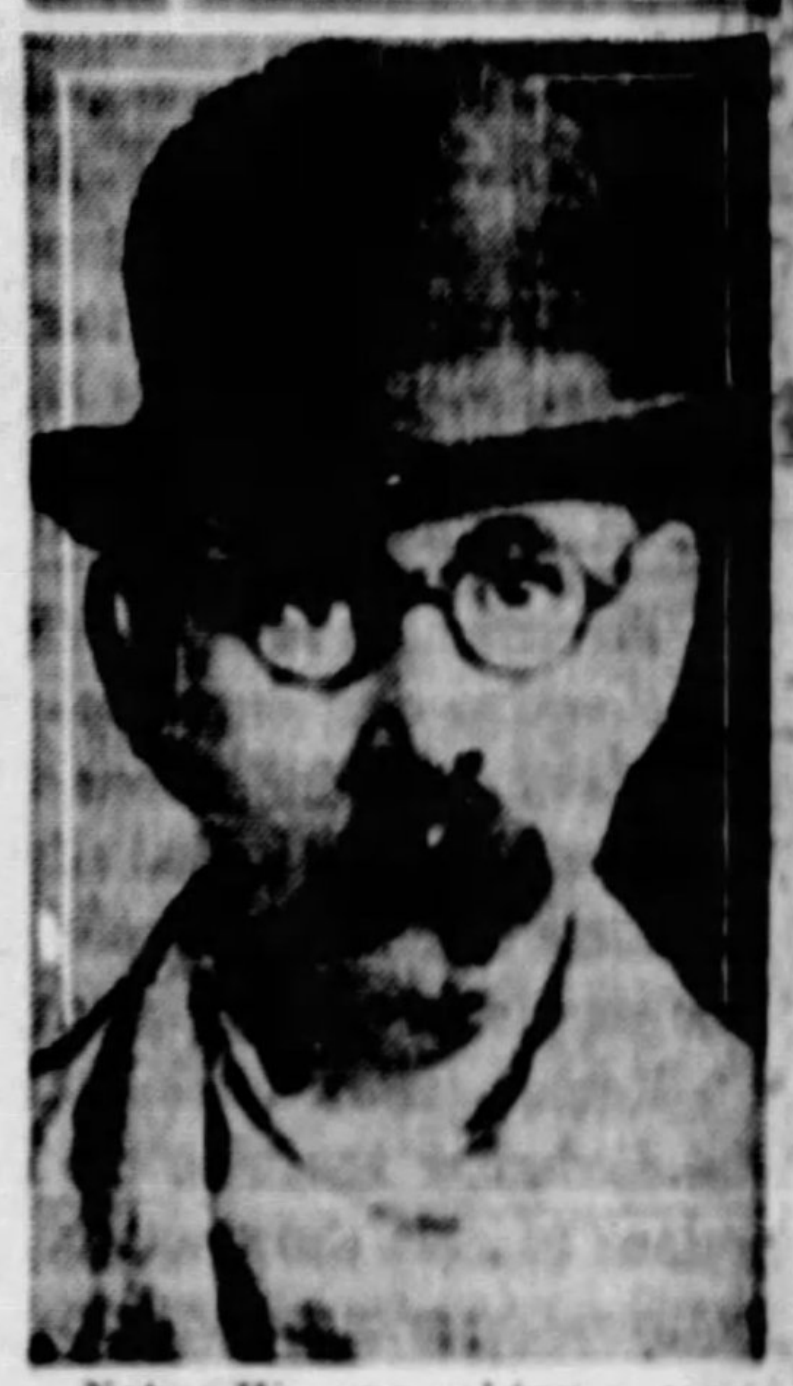
What Would You Do If You Went Broke?



Note—We are asking a number of prominent citizens what they would do if they suddenly became penniless.

Today we publish the answer of J. Addingdin Bruce, wealthy radio announcer:

"What woud I do if I found myself penniless? Why, I would go back to my old profession, of course. I used to sell electric belts. And if the electric belt business failed I woud go back to my old profession—organizer of the Bicycle League of America. And if I found this did not work out just right I would take up my father's profession—he was a buggy whip salesman. I would find some way, I assure you."

Better to Work Before Than After Mine Blasts

It is evident that all the precautions we take to prevent loss of life in mine disasters are not sufficient. The Mather mine, in Greene county, in which many of the 211 men trapped by a blast, met death, was considered a model colliery, both as to the community and the diggings, yet it claimed the usual toll when an explosion occurred.

The mine, it is said, had been "rock dusted" as a means of preventing coal dust explosions and its equipment throughout is declared to have been of modern efficiency standard. We hear tales of men rescued alive after hours and of others found dead after repeatedly telephoning for rescuers to hurry because their supply of air was scant.

Rescue crews worked valiantly, bringing out alive some who died after reaching the fresh air. Everything that could be done to save those entombed was done, but it appears that what we do after disasters of this kind is not what counts most, but what we neglected to do before.

Men can work in gas-filled mines—eight-hour shifts of rescue crews proving that. They use gas masks, of course. Our boys on the fighting fronts were equipped with gas masks. They were supposed to use them in emergencies and there was a gas mask for every soldier. It was part of his equipment—always with him.

The United States Bureau of Mines in Forbes street has developed the gas mask of the soldier and perfected it to the point where it is highly efficient for use in mines. Some mines require their miners to be equipped with these devices, and there are other mines in which they are stored in glass cases in the workings, to be used by the miners who are able to reach them after an accident. Getting to them is not always possible for some, as an explosion usually kills a certain number outright.

But, in the Mather mine, we read of a group of 16 men who erected a brattice to ward off the gas, were known to be alive for several hours after the accident, and were dead when the rescuers reached them. Available self-contained gas masks, possibly the ordinary mine gas masks, likely would have saved the lives of most of them.

The heroism and efficiency displayed after mine accidents always is a matter of comment. Where we fail is in not doing sufficient to prevent accidents and to reduce chance of loss of life when they do occur. Mining can be made safer and it ought to be.

Queer Bird?

No, Queer Dinosaur. It Vanished.

NOT A BIRD, BUT A DINOSAUR RESTORED BY NEW YORK'S MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

The sparrow "with my bow and arrow" killed cock robin. Science knows that, but doesn't know what killed off the dinosaurs. Once they traveled over the earth in bands, shaking it as they went. Almost as tall as skyscrapers, they weighed more than a dozen elephants rolled into one.

Suddenly they vanished.

Their remains are found in rocks and in various earth deposits up to a certain period thousands of centuries back. Then they disappeared.

Scientists think now, according to the learned Dr. Marshall, of the University of Virginia, that the dinosaurs died off for the lack of the health and life-giving actinic or ultra-violet rays of the sun.

At certain periods in geological history, millions of years ago, volcanoes were intensely active, the air was clouded and the earth put in shadow by volcanic dust.

Science thinks dinosaurs may have been unable to resist such conditions. The dust kept out the sunlight, deprived them of health-giving rays, shut off sun heat and diminished the supply of food.

Becoming feebler, less fertile, the dinosaurs died.

Another theory is that huge vegetarian dinosaurs were killed off by swift, savage smaller meat-eating dinosaurs, as peaceful whales in the cold ocean are attacked and destroyed by the thresher whales, or "killer" sharks.

Others have thought that rats, developing in millions, gnawed the feet of the big dinosaurs and thus made life impossible for them.

In any case, the dinosaurs are GONE, and some of our big dinosaurs corporations might take warning, and realize that it is possible to become TOO BIG.

We know that some dinosaurs were so gigantic that the small brain in their comparatively little head was not big enough to take care of the whole body, too weak to send their nervous energy all the way down the backbone.

Such dinosaurs had a second brain, half way down the spinal column, a "mental relay station," you might call it, which took orders from the brain and eyes above, and relayed those orders to the lower limbs, muscles and nerves.

Thus our big financial dinosaurs, corporations that employ thousands of men and deal in thousands of millions of dollars, have innumerable brains scattered all through the corporate system, to supplement the work of the one dominating brain at the top.

"Nature sees to it that the trees do not grow into the heavens," says an old German proverb.

Nature and the wisdom of Providence will see to it that nothing grows too big on the earth. And as the dinosaurs vanished to make room for smaller, more numerous animals, so big corporations will vanish in time when they outgrow their usefulness. But they ARE useful now. The bigger, the better.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Lightning

"Will you kindly let me know what it is best to do when an electrical thunderstorm approaches on a hot day? Should I keep the windows open or shut them? —G. M. Messina."

IT IS best to close the windows and to keep away from one that may be left open. There are records of those rare phenomena, "lightning balls," drifting into a house through an open window—and also drifting out again. Lightning bolts, too, sometimes strike through an open door or window. The walls of a house and closed doors and windows furnish shelter against lightning, but just how effective the protection is depends upon circumstances. Official government reports indicate that buildings properly fitted with lightning rods are less likely to be struck than those not thus furnished.

It is foolhardy to take chances with lightning. But it is also foolish to worry overmuch during a thunderstorm. The chances are great that no harm, especially to human life, will result from the passage of the severest thunderstorm, provided that people keep indoors, or if outdoors avoid the neighborhood of tall trees, ponds, and water courses, and other objects and places likely to "attract lightning." Wire fences become dangerous during thunderstorms, as is proved by statistics of the high relative mortality among cattle crowding near such fences when assailed by a storm. Barns containing moist hay are more likely to be struck than dwelling houses.

Lightning is an electric discharge which follows the line of least resistance, and metals afford it an attractive path, so the electric force, or tension, accumulates at the pointed end of a metal conductor, producing a strain there which, if it becomes great enough, will end in a break through the resisting medium.

The majority of lightning discharges occur between the clouds of a storm. The tension on a cloud becomes so great that it may reach millions of volts, and the resulting discharge, too gigantic to be called any longer a spark, may, in extreme cases, pierce through miles of atmosphere, like the thrust of a blinding-bright sword. It is, no doubt, fortunate for us that the number of discharges between earth and clouds is not so great as that occurring between the clouds themselves. But this is only one of many fortunate circumstances with which we seem to be favored on our planet and which ought to make us less timorous over the relatively few violent phenomena with which nature assails those who pay no attention to her warnings.

If we are a little careful in keeping out of notoriously dangerous situations, such as those above mentioned, we may enjoy with perfect equanimity the magnificent spectacle of battling cloud fleets which a major thunderstorm affords.

Yet the "voice of the thunder" is a nerve shattering and the glare of the lightning stroke so brain piercing and so frightful with its quivering speed that many persons seem unable by any effort to control their nerves during a thunderstorm. The best thing for them is to shut out the sight and, as much as possible, the sound of the battle of unchained force in the air. Lie down on a bed in an inner chamber and wait for the fracas to cease. There is very little chance that Jove with his far-darting bolts will do you any harm.

Fire Losses

IT IS not pleasant to learn that American fire losses thus far this year show an increase over the same time last year.

Our annual sacrifice of more than half a billion dollars in property and from 12,000 to 15,000 lives is not a necessary waste. Most of it is wanton.

To be sure, an increase in the figures of loss may not mean an increase in the ratio of loss, for each year sees also a great increase in the number and value of buildings.

But when we consider how large a part of new building is practically fireproof, and take into account the strenuous campaigns for carefulness, any increase in the fire loss should disturb us.

There is only one thing to do. It is to make the campaign for carefulness stronger.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

That Guilty Feeling

DO YOU find that reference to certain subjects disturbs you a lot?

Why, you cannot say, but whenever that certain subject comes up you can feel a flush coming over your face.

There is nothing in your life which should make you feel guilty of certain offenses which are charged to others, but, nevertheless, you feel uneasy when they are talked about.

You wonder if people think you guilty of the offenses attributed to these certain other persons.

The more you think of it, the greater your embarrassment, and the result is that your peace of mind is gone and you show it.

If you have never been guilty of these things, why does the mention of them affect you when you should pay no attention to it?

Possibly in your past life you contemplated just such things, but you did not fall, and now the mention of them affects you.

Well, that is not so serious, for most of us have contemplated doing many things that might have landed us in jail.

Gateways

SOMETIMES I find new tasks await
My slender strength, and yet, elate,
I welcome one and all;
For I have learned each deed I do,
Each friend I make will let me through
New gateways, great or small.

No longer now do I deplore
The hardships which I feared before,
For since I see aright
Life's every contact has revealed
An entrance to some sun-bright field,
Some vista of delight.

I pass new gateways and I go
Into strange realms I could not know
Before this toil was met;
With joy I greet each trust, each need,
And in it sees a gate to lead
To gardens fairer yet.

Tales that are Told

A Very Simple Matter

IT WAS a house built in the Tudor style and lay some distance back from the road.

The builder, very proud of his latest achievement, was showing it to a prospective client.

"There, 'ow about that, sir?" he began. "A very nice little 'ouse in Tudor style, sir."

"It's all right," returned the other; "but I don't care much for the Tudor style, personally."

"Very well, sir, we can soon alter that," smiled the builder, and beckoned to a plasterer who was descending a ladder.

"Hi, George!" he cried. "Come over 'ere a minute wiv a bucket o' whitewash an' take out them beams up there!"—London Answers.

On the Spot

A MAN called at a pastry shop and asked for a cake to be made in the shape of the letter "S." The pastry-cook said it wouldn't be ready until the end of the day. The customer replied that he did not mind, and would be back in the evening.

Towards 7 o'clock he returned and saw the cake, but did not like it. It was not the right kind of "S." He wanted a script "S."

The pastry-cook said he would make another, but it would take a day or so. The customer decided to call at the end of two days. He did, and liked the cake.

"Where shall I deliver it?" asked the pastry-cook.

"Don't deliver it," replied the customer. "I'll eat it here."

A Fair Wage

THE wayfarer leaned over the fence and endeavored to catch the eye of the man mowing his front lawn.

"Got a little job yer wants doing?" he asked.

"Yes," replied the householder. "You can finish this grass and I'll give you a bob."

The tramp came in and started to push the machine vigorously. Presently the householder walked away. Ten minutes later the tramp accosted him and demanded his money.

He was given sixpence.

"'Ere," he scowled, "'alf a mo'—"

"That's right," was the answer. "Half a mow—half pay!"

One of Themselves

SATURDAY afternoon was a day set apart for the village band to indulge in its weekly practice march.

On this particular day they happened to halt outside the local J. P.'s house. The latter was a very irritable man who hated bands. Consequently, he was far from pleased when the sound of martial music fell upon his ears.

"Look here!" he cried, rushing up to the bandmaster. "If you don't stop that infernal din, I'll go and fetch our policeman."

But the bandmaster was equal to the occasion.

"You can't do that, sir," he smiled. "That's 'im playin' the trombone."—Exchange.

Dissatisfied

NOTICING a sour-faced Scot pulling and tugging at a stamp-machine, a postoffice official inquired what was the matter.

It took the Scot several seconds to recover sufficiently from his emotion to speak.

"Ah put a penny in this," he began, "an' four stamps came oot." And he started hauling once again at the machine.

"But," exclaimed the official, "what's the idea? What's all the fuss about, eh?"

"Look ye here, mon," said the other, "I put anither penny in, ye ken, an' naething's come oot. The thing's nae mair than a sweendle!"—Exchange.

THOUGHTS OF THE GREAT—

The wisdom of the wise and the experience of the ages may be preserved by the quotation.—Isaac Disraeli.

The difference between perseverance and obstinacy is that one often comes from a strong will, and the other from a strong won't.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 22.—Broadway seems to me to be mellowest when lights come on. Dusk brings a softening influence. Broadway is an "after dark" street with everybody looking forward to anticipatory joys of the night. The attitude is expectant, like hunters awaiting the horn.

From the side street rooming houses and shady hotels at nightfall come the doubtful and provocative maidens, glamorously bright with cosmetic artifices. The cheaper cafes fill with early dinner chorus girls and late breakfast sure thing boys. The stiff-lipped manner vanishes.

Everybody chatters. To the stranger the patter seems strange—a medley of half-world phrases turned out weekly by the White Way slang makers. It is a distinct patois, and when understood as illuminative as any coined. Nobody seems to know exactly from whence it came.

At this period when Broadway is pluming for the night the army of musicians in Tuxedos descends on the street for dinner before going to movie houses, restaurants and theaters. Too, there are the out-of-town experimentalists in quest of thrills.

The gambling house runners look for suckers as well as the cicerones of the dives. Broadway has a tempo different from that of any other time of day. It seems like a small town drifting home to dinner to stop and gossip in the postoffice and drug store.

As a matter of fact it is the hour when the real Broadwayites relax and are themselves. The rest of the town is preparing for the play and other pleasures. The gleaners, the wastrels, the wise guys and smart crackers can slip off their masks and be themselves.

Later on the street stiffens and bristles with sophistication. Sin shows its silk. And Broadway begins to stalk for its prey just as it did in the old ten-twent and thirt years ago.

It strikes me no one in the world looks so sheepish and self-conscious as a chef in uniform passing through a dining room.

Paducah's newest and best hotel, to open shortly, is named for its favorite son, Irvin Cobb, which is proper. He put the town on the map in a big way. Among other things named for Cobb are a cigar, a cup-winning pointer dog, a flannel hunting shirt, a race horse, a Missouri corn cob pipe, a canyon in Oregon, a street in a Texas town and a cap. One article, however, he refused permission to be named for him. It is a blue button-up-the-back smock like he wears at his desk. "It looks rather silly," said Cobb, "and I prefer not to have it advertised."

One of the indoor pleasantries these days among high fliers is inventing and naming cocktails. A curious gentleman has listed more than 100 new inventions with fancy names. The most striking on the list is "The Faltering Step."

On Madison avenue near the Ritz this morning an imported limousine was resting at the curb. In the front seat was the chauffer with plum-colored livery and shiny puttees earnestly reading the Atlantic monthly. In the rear seat was a dowager scanning the pages of the Graphic through a lorgnette.

* * *

New York appears to have become taxi-conscious. Very few old ramshackle taxis remain. In the past six months hundreds of new, shiny and comfortable cabs have been unloosed. The change was due to a sudden discrimination on the part of a public that would take the first cab that came along. Now it is not unusual for a fare to wave four or five cabs away until one comes along that suits his taste.

* * *

Nearly all cabs now are 15 and 5 cents. A few of the 20 and 10 cents cabs hang on, but with few takers save on rainy days.

Another paragraph in a southern paper refers to me as "a typical New Yorker," but until I can distinguish a private home from a speakeasy I'll continue to consider the trade-last premature.

Quick Justice

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A man by the name of A. H. Adams, a confessed bank robber, was arraigned the other day in Salt Lake City. He pleaded guilty, waived a preliminary hearing and was sentenced to from five years to life imprisonment, all within a half hour. Some minutes later he was dressed in the state-prison garb.

This is the sort of item that should be played up in big print on the front page of the newspaper.

It does no good to talk about the crime wave while we are constantly feeding the public upon stories of crime, the psychological effect of which is deplorable.

It does little good to attack prize-fighting in editorials, while on the front page the exploits of terrible bruisers are played up in big type.

The effect of a paper's policy is best determined by the way it arranges its news rather than by the tone of its editorials. Everybody reads the news, a comparatively few read the editorials.

And the above item about bank robber Adams is the kind of news that ought to be broadcast.

What deters the criminal is not cruelty and inhuman punishment, but quick justice and sure.

Some misguided judges have advocated whipping or more cruelty in the prisons. Some people, in their revolt from sentimentalism, urge that prisons be made more horrible than they are, and urge that the death penalty be maintained as a deterrent to crime.

Quick punishment, the minimum of the law's delays, and sure punishment are the best means of preventing crime.

Unfortunately, spectacular crime is news, while swift punishment occupies a news position of subordinate interest.

One trouble that has been found with capital punishment is that juries are loth to convict and very often the criminal escapes simply because of the juries' scruples, whereas if life imprisonment were made swift and sure the criminal would have a harder time of it to escape.

What the criminal wants to realize is that he is up against a perfect and incorruptible machine and that there is no way to beat the law.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD.

MRS. EDITH ROCKEFELLER M'CORMICK, of Chicago, says: "Whenever I see a man trundling a baby buggy down the street while his wife is out earning the living, I think, 'Here is a wonderful case of true understanding.'"

So that's what these men mean when they say their wives do not understand them! Shades of our fighting ancestors!

Mrs. McCormick says, too: "There are no cave men. There never was such a thing." And she adds that in prehistoric days it was the women who dragged the men around by their whiskers.

Today they merely lead them around by the nose, which shows how times have improved.

If others in authority follow the example of Gov. Paulen of Kansas, alimony as a luxury certainly is doomed. Gov Paulen says that a woman who can't hold her husband's love is not entitled to help from the sheriff to bring him back. So he will not sign any more extradition writs for wife-deserting husbands.

In other words, having killed the goose with the golden eggs, women who toil not nor spin, but are Solomon-like on Easter morning, will have to hunt a job and buy an alarm clock. And they will have to set it for 7 o'clock. Woe is them!

It is going to be hard on what is called "the unmental ones," who, if they wore only what they earned, would have to join the Follies.

Public sentiment certainly is working against this kind of grafting. Even women on juries won't give other women alimony. It's a great victory for the right kind of women, because the advertising alimony has received has frightened more than one good man out of his promises.

Gov. Paulen struck a great field for good work. The man who has been afraid of his wife because she has been holding a warrant over his head, probably will go home when he hears the news, and slam the door so that it can be heard all over Kansas. Then he will threaten to leave the state. "Then TRY to get me!" Can't you hear him saying it?

And, oh, my dear, what some women wouldn't rather stand than go to work! With no prospect for alimony, some of these women might cook dinner every night. For they wouldn't put their poodle in the kind of home they could earn for themselves.

If all judges took Gov. Paulen's attitude, the marriage and the divorce markets would be flatter than a flapjack.

You've heard 'em say: "Dearie, you should get married once anyway, then you don't have to earn so much. With alimony you can get along nicely." With no alimony, they would simply stay single and eliminate the cost of a wedding and the agony (?) of a divorce.

With alimony eliminated, love would again begin to figure more prominently in marriages.

You seldom see a lazy spinster.

The Hon. Mrs. Bovill, addressing the Ladies' Imperial Club in London, says that women shouldn't be given a vote till they are 35. That until then their time is taken up with flirting, finding a husband and starting home life.

But the time when their vote expresses what they think and not what some man tells them, is the age before 35.
